CURLEY SEEKS 2ND TERM: HALTS BOOM FOR SENATE

CALVIN COOLIDGE, addressing the eighth semi-annual meeting of the business organization of the government. Washington, D. C., Jan. 26, 1925.
"Every dollar that is saved by careful administration adds to the amount by which taxes may be reduced in the future. It is practical economy which I have in mind and which we must practice. I had rather talk of saving pennies and save them than theorize in millions and save nothing."

Can Women Write Songs?
$100,000,000 for Airports
Starving Improves Mice

By Arthur Brisbane

This evening comes Halloween, or "All Hallows Eve." Modern children light bonfires on this day, not knowing that their ancestors have done that, for centuries long before the beginning of the Christian era, to keep away ghosts and witches supposed to wander abroad on Halloween night.

The ancient Druids dreaded Halloween as a night on which "Saman," the lord of death, called wicked souls together. Now, with superstition and credulity diminishing, we have only candles in hollow pumpkins and mince pie, excellent substitutes for ghosts and witches.

Mr. Hsiung, called "China's Shakespeare," arrives with his pretty wife, six inches shorter than he, which makes him five feet tall.

Her pleasing name is Dymia, meaning "black plum blossom." Her husband's latest play, "Lady Precious Stream," ran 400 nights in London and you may see it here.

Mr. Hsiung thinks American men will not understand "our Chinese philosophy of love." Maybe not, but they might try.

Movies have greatly influenced China, says the Shakespeare of the East, "some of our women even are becoming platinum blondes."

Mr. Herbert R. Mayes, learned editor of Pictorial Review, asks "Can women write songs?" and to settle the question, offers a prize of one thousand dollars for the best song written by a woman, sent to Pictorial Review, New York City, not later than November 30.

Mr. Mayes' question was answered in the affirmative by Sappho 2600 years ago. She surely provided music for her wonderful description of evening that brings home the sheep and the goats and brings back the child to its mother.

The greatest song writers should be the women, especially older women, in whose minds and hearts memory is always writing "words and music."

It is announced by Mr. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, that the government will spend $100,000,000 building airports "in every state of the nation." Something must be done to put to work 3,500,000 "employables" by December 1.

Airport building might include building parallel highways from ocean to ocean and from North to South, with airplane landings, properly lighted, adjoining the highways at regular intervals.

Seven hundred and fifty airport projects have been approved, work will start on 250 at once. This might all be very convenient for foreign war planes if the United States should continue to neglect air defense.

In Italy, "meatless Tuesdays and Wednesdays" take you back to our big war days when American mothers were told not to give sugar to their children because somebody in Armenia needed it.

Italian mothers may find comfort in interesting experiments by the distinguished Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute. Dr. Carrel, experimenting scientifically with 40,000 mice, all inbred, brothers and sisters being mated, and practically all alike, found that a little starving increased the mouse intelligence. Smaller, more intelligent mice, were born when they were never allowed to have quite enough to eat. But what they did eat had to be the very best of food.

Read Dr. Carrel's admirable new book, "Man, the Unknown," just published by Harpers. It will tell you things about yourself that may surprise you.

Mrs. Mina Miller Edison, 69, widow of Thomas A. Edison, marries Edward E. Hughes, 73, retired steel manufacturer. Best wishes and congratulations to both.

If Edison could know about it, he would say: "I am glad that my widow is happy and will not spend the rest of her life with thoughts concentrated on a shadow."

Any man who would forbid his widow to marry again, if she could do so happily, may be classed with the primitive Hindu who insisted that his young widow be burned alive with his corpse when he died. You may thank England for stopping that.

Voltaire, in his "Zadig," presented a plan to stop the funeral burning. The young widow was to spend her evening, before the burning, with the handsomest youth in the village. She never turned up for the burning ceremony.

Mythen Boy's Life Bared

NOTE THREAT REVEALED BY PARENTS

By JAMES J. SMITH

Bobby Mythen's heartbroken parents conferred for hours today with state officials directing the reopened investigation of their son's suspected murder on Beacon Hill.

Every detail of the Winthrop High senior's life that might have the slightest bearing upon his death, they were asked to recall, particularly his acquaintances which might have led him into association with the Hill's "Bohemia."

Information regarding a threatening letter reported received by a member of the family two weeks after Bobby vanished on the Hill last Christmas Eve was also sought from Mr. and Mrs. William J. Mythen.

Existence of this letter was exclusively told by the Boston Evening American earlier in the week.

It was received during the time that Mrs. Mythen and other members of the family were seeking the youth's whereabouts and while they had certain houses on the Hill under surveillance.

BOBBY'S LIFE WAS PRICE SET

Its purport was that, unless this watch was ended, they would not see Bobby alive again.

In the light of subsequent developments and the discovery, in March, of the boy's body in the Charles river below the Hill, investigators believe that Bobby was, in fact, alive and probably a cap-

Harvard Boy Denies Striking Blow, Pins Beating on Chum

By JOHN W. ENGLISH

Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American

Denying his guilt in the attack on Frank Foster, 67-year-old Dunster House janitor, Eugene H. George, accused Harvard sophomore, today charged a fellow student with the beating.

The story told police by George, 21-year-old Milton sophomore, names a wealthy and socially prominent classmate as Foster's assailant.

EUGENE H. GEORGE

George's story was told exclusively to the Boston Evening American.

Meantime, another student sought for questioning was located by this paper in a suite in a downtown Boston hotel.

"I have nothing to say. I can't talk," he said. "See my lawyer."

Father Flies Here

His father, flying here from New York, has retained counsel in expectation of developments.

George's story, detailing the fight in which the elderly janitor was critically injured, named his classmate as the only assailant of Foster, and cleared three others whose names have been printed, but not by this newspaper.

Other developments included George's arraignment and plea of not guilty, with continuance of the case until November 14, recommendation of the Harvard Student Council that guilty students be expelled and a charge by Cambridge police that persons were attempting to hamper the investigation.

Three other Harvard students broke up the fight, acting as peacemakers and striking no blows, George claims.

As to himself, George says he

Fitchburg Mayor's Operation Success

Continuing his fight for life, Mayor Robert E. Greenwood of Fitchburg underwent a successful brain operation today at City Hospital.

Tuesday the youthful mayor suffered a skull fracture and other injuries when his automobile was in a head-on collision with another car at Shirley.

Today's operation, which took more than an hour, was performed by Dr. Donald Munro, brain specialist, and was similar to that which Dr. Munro performed upon Irvin "Ace" Bailey, former star of the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey team.

A 2 p. m. bulletin today said the operation had been a success and that conditions for Mayor Greenwood were favorable, although his name was still on the danger list.

DUCE WILLING TO CONSIDER PEACE TALK

War in Brief

GENEVA — "Italy is willing to negotiate," says a Mussolini spokesman. League of Nations meets to set deadline for economic sanctions.

PARIS — "Peace will be made," says Premier Pierre Laval as he leaves for Geneva.

LONDON—England demands Mussolini stop press and radio attacks on Britain in Rome. Students there cry "Down with England!"

ROME—Italy surveys its merchant marine to determine naval auxiliary strength.

AT THE FRONT—Italians in southern Ethiopia bombard Gorrahei. In north Mussolini's legions occupy fortress of Amba Sion, 30 miles from Makale.

Geneva, Oct. 31 — An Italian spokesman announced today the warring Fascist nation was willing to negotiate for peace with Ethiopia.

The spokesman made this assertion as the League of Nations offered Italy a final interval for consideration of settlement of the East African conflict before being subjected to an economic blockade.

"Italy is willing to negotiate," he asserted in reference to the visit to Geneva of Baron Pompeo

Earth Shocks Add to Honduras Woe

By Associated Press

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Oct. 31—Earth shocks were added to the troubles of flood-ridden Honduras today as rescue workers reported a known flood death toll of 131 persons. The government estimated the damage would exceed $12,000,000.

Strong tremors were felt in the towns of Maraita and San Pedro Sula.

GOV. CURLEY TO RUN FOR RE-ELECTION

By JOHN A. MALLOY

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

Chicago, Oct. 31—Governor James M. Curley of Massachusetts will run for re-election to his present office.

Just whom he will support for election to the United States Senate will be decided at a conference of his political associates to be called soon after his return to Boston Saturday.

These were the definite impressions gathered by the Boston Evening American in a chat with the Governor at the Drake Hotel here today.

It was a very happy Governor, who paused here to visit friends on the last lap of his journey home from Honolulu to Beacon Hill.

He was happy because of the improvement in the condition of his daughter, Mary, the bride of Lieutenant Colonel Edward C. Donnelly.

Governor Curley admitted that he had been worried over his daughter's condition when he started away to meet her on her return from Shanghai where she was stricken with appendicitis.

MARY LOOKS WELL

But the youthful Mrs. Donnelly, although forced to take her activities a bit easily, looked well and happy today and was eagerly looking forward to greeting old friends Saturday.

And where will the Donnellys live?

"I have heard in Weston, in Milton, in Dedham, and, of course, in Boston," Mary smiled, "but the truth is, Eddie and I have not decided. We are going to take an apartment in a hotel, until we find a permanent home."

And now back to the Governor, and his plans and the successor to the late Judge Frederick McLeod of the Superior Court.

"I think pretty nearly every lawyer in the state must be after that place," the Governor observed, "but I have put it out of mind until I get back to Boston."

He was told the betting was that Governor's Councillor J. Arthur Baker might get the appointment.

BIG JOB AHEAD

"Well, I think he would make a very fine judge and I think he rates very serious consideration if he really wants the place," the Governor said.

And then back to his own future.

"There is still a big job to be done in Massachusetts," he said, "there are thousands of people who should be given a chance to get back to work and support their families. The work and wages program will be getting in full swing this winter.

"I suppose if I should decide to step out and run for the Senate it would start a free-for-all battle

One Dead In New Shock In Helena

By Associated Press

Helena, Mont., Oct. 31—One man was killed in the fall of the Kessler Brewery smokestack west of the city when the earthquakes renewed their intensity here today.

The office in which the Associated Press bureau is located was jarred severely, plastering fell and a crack was opened in the wall.

The first shock was followed within a few seconds by several others. The jarring tumbled a number of Main street store fronts out into the pavement and workmen, who had been repairing the earlier damage, fled from scaffoldings.

A number of scaffoldings were tossed into the street with the debris from buildings. Scores of windows were broken.

Residents fled from apartments in the downtown section into below freezing weather, many of them without heavy clothing.

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 31 (AP)—A slight earthquake jarred windows and was plainly felt in office buildings here today. No damage was reported.

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 31 (AP)—A distinct earth tremor, which shifted furniture and sent water spurting from fountain bowls in downtown office buildings, was felt here today.

ITALY OFFERS TO TALK PEACE AS LEAGUE MEETS

'WILLING TO NEGOTIATE,' SAYS MUSSOLINI ENVOY

Aloisi, representative of Premier Mussolini, due tomorrow for the meeting of representatives of 52 nations, who are to set the date for actual enforcement of economic sanctions.

ALL HANDS SPARRING

A British spokesman conceded that Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare also would be pleased to sound out the situation before application of the boycott, probably 15 days hence.

Premier Pierre Laval of France was known to be particularly eager to find a quick solution to the dispute to halt the Italo-Ethiopian war.

The general situation, however, presented the aspect of statesmen sparring for positions with reluctance to admit that any party was disposed to make important concessions.

Italian circles announced that Baron Aloisi was coming at the special request of the British and French governments. This the British denied.

The Italians in turn denied that Aloiso was bringing fresh proposals considerably milder than those presented during the futile tri-power peace talks at Paris.

League leaders forecast tremendous difficulties in going far beyond the committee of five peace plan for international development of Ethiopia which Il Duce rejected.

OTHER CONCESSIONS

Any additional concessions to Mussolini, the leaders said, must be counterbalanced by other concessions to Emperor Haile Selassie, including an outlet to the sea.

The League's committee of 18 made a technical examination of the replies from various governments on the question of sanctions and spent an hour discussing how to handle contracts with Italy.

It adopted a Spanish proposal that any contracts with Italy or Italian firms which were fully paid up to October 19, the date on which sanctions were voted, can be fulfilled without violation of the sanctions obligations.

The question of how to handle contracts on which partial payments have been made will be discussed later. Some delegates contended that if, for example, an 80 per cent payment had been made, it would be unfair to the contractor not to let him complete his contract.

'Peace Will Be Made,' Says Laval, on Way to Geneva

By Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 31—Premier Pierre Laval conferred today with Vittorio Cerruti, Italian ambassador to France, and Sir George Russell Clerk, British ambassador.

The conference took place just before Laval's departure for Geneva to renew further direct contacts with Italian and British statesmen in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

Laval received Ambassador Clerk after talking to Ambassador Cerruti. Officials professed ignorance of what was discussed.

They said, however, that the outlook seemed to be for "sanctions first, and hope for peace afterward."

Premier Laval declared:

"Peace with will be made.

"It will be made despite malevolent indiscretion, spiteful controversies and misleading reports spread by circles calling themselves authoritative."

Britain Demands Il Duce Stop Italian Press Attacks

By Associated Press

London, Oct. 31—Great Britain today made new representations to Mussolini against continuation of attacks upon it in the Italian press.

Similar representations were made in regard to the alleged anti-British propaganda on the Italian radio.

This action was taken yesterday, it was disclosed when Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, called on Mussolini

Sir Eric, informed circles revealed, adopted a firm attitude with Il Duce and advised him that Britain cannot relax its fleet activities in the Mediterranean as long as the present situation remains unimproved.

Sir Eric explained further the Italian withdrawal of one division of troops from Libya was satisfactory as far as it went, but the fact remains that the troops still there are greatly in excess of normal strength.

The British government issued a warning against trade with Italy today, in advance of the League of Nations meeting to set the date for enforcement of economic sanctions.

An official announcement, referring to Italian trade debts to Great Britain, said:

"Firms which contemplate export of further goods to Italy from this country should bear these facts in mind.

"In these circumstances, His Majesty's government cannot assume responsibility for endeavoring to secure payment for goods so shipped."

Ethiopian Tribesmen Win Surprise Battle

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Addis Ababa, Oct. 31—Naked and invisible in the dead of night, a horde of warriors of the Assaimara tribe, one of the most ferocious in the Danakil desert, attacked an Italian supply train not far from the Eritrean frontier.

Many Italians were killed and 25 camels were captured, according to an official statement today.

The attack, which was a classic illustration of the battle tactics of the Danakil savages, occurred at 4 o'clock in the morning.

Completely surprised, the Italians were unable to use their machine guns, and were butchered in their camp beds.

It is significant that no mention in the official statement was made of any Italian prisoners for the Assaimaras are one of those tribes which do not take prisoners.

Vatican Safeguards Money Sent From Abroad

By Associated Press

Vatican City, Oct. 31—The Vatican itself has to face the problem of League of Nations sanctions against Italy.

This little independent state, the head of the Roman Catholic church, is completely isolated in Italy and might be shut off from supplies of money sent in from abroad and which must necessarily pass in through Italy.

Vatican authorities announced today that measures were being taken to assure that money coming from abroad to Catholic students here would reach them without difficulty and to get the Vatican State's rights recognized by the sanctionist countries at Geneva.

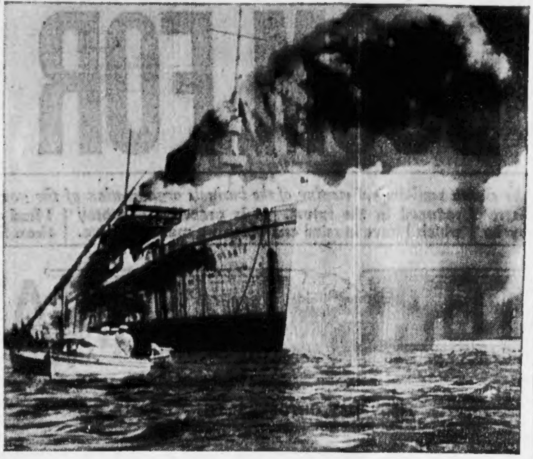
British to Rescue as Italian Ship Burns



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Rescue crews from British naval vessels stand by, as flames sweep the Italian liner Ausonia in the harbor of Alexandria, Egypt. Although three men lost their lives in the explosion which started the blaze and seven other persons were injured subsequently, worse casualties were avoided by heroic and efficient work of English sailors and officers. The incident served to relieve international tension over the Ethiopian situation.

BRITAIN'S DEBT DEFAULT HIT

London, Oct. 31—Viscount Snowden, former chancellor of the exchequer, pushed Great Britain's war debts to the United States into the political arena today.

In a speech on behalf of the opposition Liberals, who are fighting for power in the next government, he declared:

"I was very merciful to Chancellor of the Exchequer Chamberlain in dealing with his unbalanced budgets. I made no mention of the fact that for years he has defaulted on the American debt payments."

Students in Rome Cry "Down With England"

Rome, Oct. 31—Italian students shouting "down with England" demonstrated outside the British embassy today.

The students, some of whom carried banners denouncing Britain action against Italy in relation to sanctions, marched through Rome, and were frequently cheered by the population.

Police quards kept them under control at the embassy, but their cries were plainly heard inside.

ITALIANS WIN DOUBLE

Ethiopians Beaten on 2 Fronts

Addis Ababa, Oct. 31—Fierce fighting on two fronts brought victories to Italian forces as their thrusts into Ethiopia were extended, report reaching here today revealed.

Heavy casualties in a clash in the vicinity of Gorrahel, Italy's next main objective on the southern front, were indicated in dispatches.

There, thousands of Italian soldiers and native Dubats swept aside Ethiopian warrior hordes.

In a sharp action on the northwest border in the other clash, the Italians crossed the Setit river, dispersed and drove back a concentration of Ethiopians at Niaghin

Invading forces then recrossed the river and resumed the defensive on their side of the frontier between Ethiopia and Italy's colony of Eritrea.

General Rudolfo Graziani, Italian commander of the southern front, was reported bringing up his artillery for an attack on Gorrahel after his victory near that city.

The region now cleared between Scillave and Gorrahel is a well-watered area which would furnish Italians necessary water.

Correspondents with the northern army reported that the lines there appeared ready to move forward again within the next two or three days.

Lone Italian Officer Captured With Tank

By Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Oct. 31—The Ethiopian government today announced the capture of a lone Italian officer and his tank near Dolo, in southern Ethiopia.

The officer was reported to have been found, half dead from thirst, traveling north in his tank in seach of water.

The Ethiopians said they gave him water, but placed him in chains in a tent.

NOTIZIE DELLA GUERRA IN ITALIANO

By FORMER LIEUTENANT GIOVANNI NANIA

AVANZATA SUI DUE FRONTI

Messaggi giunti da Addis Abeba informano che le truppe italiane operanti nei due settori del Nord e del Sud, continuano vittoriosamente la loro penetrazione nell'interno dell'Etiopia, accolti ovunque con manifestazioni di giubilo.

I messaggi dicono inoltre di uno scontro avvenuto fra le truppe italiane e quelle abissine nelle vicinanze di Gorrahel, meta delle colonne italiane marcianti dal Sud.

Tale scontro avrebbe causato perdite considerevolissime.

Un altro scontro avvenuto sul confine Nordovest dell'Etiopia, ha condotto gl'italiani oltre il fiume Setit, da dove, disperse a respinte le concentrazioni abissine di Niaghin, hanno continuato la loro marcia vittoriosa verso la meta prestabilita.

Rapporti pervenuti al quartiere generale del Nord, dicono che le forze del Sud comandate dal generale Rodolfo Graziani, hanno attraversato per oltre la meta' il deserto di Ogaden e puntano adesso risolutamente su Gorrahei.

La regione occupata fra Scillave e Gorrahei abbonda di numerosissimi pozzi e potra' fornire dell'acqua necessaria tutte le truppe del settore.

Corrispondenti di servizio sul fronte del Nord, informano che le line e italiane dislocate cola' sono pronte di tutto punto per riprendere il movimento in avanti, atteso entro i prossimi due o tre giorni.

Alla minaccia contenuta nel trattato ,d'alleanza franco-inglese per la collaborazione navale ed aerea delle due nazioni contro una temuta aggressione da parte dell'Italia o della Germania, il Presidente Mussolini ha oggi risposto tempestivamente, adottando provvedimenti di carattere militare, quale la mobilitazione della gente di mare e la destinazione al servizio di guerra di tutte le navi mercantili italiane. Si calcola che la marina mercantile italiana, la quale e' centralizzata nelle mani della compagnia "Italia" e della compagnia "Consulich," potra' fornire una flotta da 500 a 600 vessilli.

LA PACE SI FARA'

Il Primo Ministro Pierre Laval ha conferito stamane con S. E. Vittorio Cerruti, ambasciatore italiano in Francia, e con Sir George Russell Clerk, ambasciatore inglese. La conferenza ebbe luogo pochi momenti prima che Laval partisse per Ginevra, per quanto non si conoscano i dettagli della discussione, si vuole che il contatto sia stato richiesto per un'intesa sulle proposte di pace presentate ieri.

Dopo la conferenza, Laval avrebbe dichiarato testualmente:

"La pace si fara'. Si fara' a dispetto di tutte le malevoli indiscrezioni, di tutte le acriminiose controversie e di tutti i falsi rapporti fatti circolare ad arte da sedicenti autorita' ufficiali."

Il prossimo raissunto sulle vicende della guerra italo-etiopica, redatto in italiano dal ten. Giovanno Nania, apparira' sul Boston Evening American domani.

"All the evidence we have obtained during our nine months of investigation is available to the authorities of other states who request it,' Bennett said.

Bennett also revealed that the state, which has cooperated with various district attorneys in the preliminary investigation, will participate in any trials which may result.

Indictments are expected tomorrow fro mthe Saratoga County Grand Jury. That body will hear testimony tomorrow from Herbert Bayard Swope and John Hay Whitney, members of the state racing commission, as well as from two prominent jockeys.

The attorneyy-general emphasized that nothing has come to light yet which casts reflection upon the conduct of racing in the state.

"All our evidence indicates that the wrong-doing is confined to lawless gangs who have fastened themselves like barnacles on the sport," Bennett explained.

"It also indicates that much of this fake 'tipping' has been done through syndicates which are national in scope.

"This has been called to the attention of federal authorities, who realize that the fake tipsters are operating at tracks in other states."

Store Manager Honored at Party

Harry D. Ross, general manager of Leopold Morse Company, was guest of honor at a party held at the Parker House last night when the sales force of Morse's Adams square store welcomed him home from Hartford, where Mr. Ross designed and opened the new Leopold Morse Hartford store.

Among guests and speakers were Leon Strauss, treasurer; Julius Morse, president; Alfred Weinberg, vice-president; Thomas Brady, Summer street store manager; Laurence Kelly, University Shop manager, and Dan Sullivan, personal manager. Toastmaster was Lewin Joel; the banquet committee included Henry Cameron, Joseph Breen and Allie Coles.

FIGHT LEAGUE TO LIMIT, SAYS MUSSOLINI

By Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 31—Premier Mussolini told blackshirts and academicians today that Italy would oppose League of Nations sanctions with "the most implacable resistance."

In a speech inaugurating the new University of Rome, Il Duce called on students and instructors alike to join in keeping Italy's spirit invincible.

As he stood in the new stadium, one of the structures recently completed for the university, the Fascist chief declared:

"The University of Rome is inaugurated at a time in which our soldiers are carrying civilization forward with their courage and their sacrifice, without asking anything of any body.

"Nor should it be ignored that the University of Rome is being born October 31 while at Geneva the coalition of egoism and plutocracy is striving unsuccessfully to check young Italy of the Blackshirts.

"In the face of economic siege for which the entire civilized world should have a sense of supreme shame; in the face of an experiment which is being made today for the first time against the Italian people, let it be said that we shall present the most implacable resistance in the firmest of our decisions.

"You comrades of the University will make of this university, as of all others in Italy, a gymnasium, a bulwark and a fortress of the spirit of arms, which, when united, assure victory."

Italians Find Wells Salted by Ethiopians

By Associated Press

Edaga Hamus, Ethiopia, Oct. 31—Italian troops reported back today that they had found wells which had been salted by the Ethiopians as they retreated.

The troops concerned had been marching toward the east in flanking operations.

Italian military authorities said none of the water supplies had been poisoned.

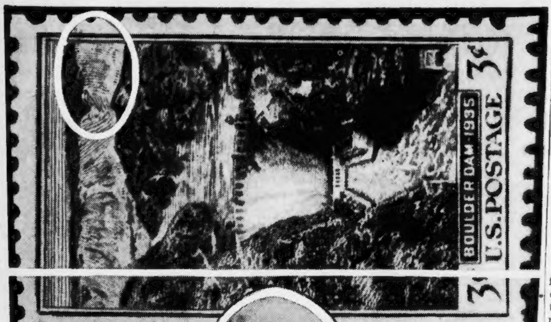
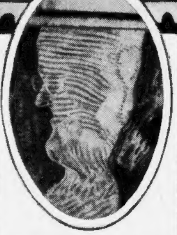
? 'Boulder Dam' Foolishness or What, Mr. Farley ?





Here's a large-scale photographic reproduction of the new Boulder Dam three-cent postage stamp, in the design of which keen-sighted observers believe they can see a likeness of President Roosevelt's profile. The supposed face is best visible with the stamp turned sideways, like this, lettering to the right. Look in the upper left hand corner, then study the enlargement below, which has been retouched by an artist for emphasis, and make up your own mind—who if anybody—is being kidded!

Boulder Dam Profile Is 'Discovered'

Postoffice circles were stirred today — but not too much — when it was discovered that the new Boulder Dam 3-cent postage stamp has a facial likeness worked into the drawing of the huge water power project.

Coming up out of the stamp, after an intense study with a magnifying glass, Harold B. Geary, a Gloucester high school teacher, declared it was a profile of President Roosevelt.

Insisting that it is the profile of the President, Geary said:

"My observation was not accidental, because of the controversy centering on the name of the dam. I thought this was an opportunity for a little by-play, and hence my vigilant inspection."

There has been considerable controversy over the naming of the project. Begun during President Hoover's administration, one California editor, a close friend of the former chief executive, still consistently refers in his newspaper to the dam as "Hoover Dam."

Now maybe an explanation is due from Postmaster-General James A. Farley.

Romance In Dutch Treat

A student "Dutch treat" romance starting at the University of Wisconsin, will reach its climax in Harvard Chapel on next Wednesday.

Miss Audrey Ranson, 25, a graduate student at Chicago University, arrived in Cambridge today to wed Herman A. Teufel, 21, a Harvard law student.

Both Teufel and his bride-to-be were graduated from the University of Wisconsin last June.

The couple plan to keep house in Cambridge, and money will be no problem to them—as the bride "has plenty."

Preparing to meet his future wife today, Teufel explained that he and his family are "poor, but I believe honorable."

He then asked:

"Why should we wait until I graduate from law school before marrying? Audrey is a wonderful girl. I love her. She seems to love me.

"Of course, there is an old tradition that a poor man should not marry a girl who is comfortably fixed, knowing that she will have to help out financially.

"That's old-fashioned. What good is her money if she doesn't spend it? I have been lonely here, and so I asked her to come and marry me now while we both feel more like marrying than we may ever feel again."

GIRLS' DAGGER GANG

Police Face New South Boston War

A group of 'teen-age charmers, abnded together under the menacing tag, "Dripping Daggerettes," was today disclosed as the first girls' gang in the knowledge of the Boston police department.

Although their names have never darkened a police blotter, these flyweight Amazons are regarded by police of South Boston's Station 6 as just so many blonde, brunette and torchy-tressed alibis for the countless and varied misdeameanors of that territory's "Dripping Dagger Gang."

CRASH POLICE PATROL

This was disclosed today as an aftermath of a hearing in Judge Edward L. Logan's South Boston municipal court involving two youthful members of the "Dripping Dagger" organization.

In a stolen car, driven at breakneck speed, they allegedly crashed into a police patrol, tossing it 40 feet across the street against a building. The crash resulted in probable fatal injuries to Patrolman Murtagh McEvoy, 42, of N street, South Boston, and serious injuries to Patrolman William Cahoon, 43, of Washington street, Brighton.

YOUTH SENTENCED

While the would-be Capones of the "Dripping Dagger Gang" hurried from the scene of the accident, a passing motorist took the two officers to Boston City Hospital, where McEvoy, suffering a concussion of the brain, has his name on the danger list.

In court this morning, John Ridge, 17, of Gold street, South Boston, was sentenced to the house of correction for 1½ years for larceny of an automobile, driving to endanger lives and leaving the scene of an accident.

WALKER Welcomed HOME

FLOTILLA HAILS N. Y. EX-MAYOR

By Associated Press

Aboard S. S. Manhattan, Off Quarantine, New York, Oct. 31 —James J. "Jimmy" Walker, former mayor of New York, returned home today from almost three years of self-imposed exile in Europe.

Walker, with his wife, the former Betty Compton, musical comedy star, arrived at quarantine on the liner Manhattan at noon.

The advance guard of a flotilla of welcoming craft—two pleasure yachts—met the Manhattan shortll after it passed Ambrose Light.

Their whistles blew a greeting to be answered by a horse salute from the liner. The yachts flew banners bearing the inscriptions "Hello, Jimmy," and "Welcome home, Jimmy."

Jimmy and his wife stood on the bridge of the Manhattan.

He wore a dark-blue pin-stripe suit with a pale blue shirt.

Shortly before the ship hesitated at Ambrose to pick up the pilot, the former mayor visited the ship's barber for a shave and then returned to his cabin for an early lunch.

First Mrs. Walker Refuses Callers

By Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Oct. 31—The first Mrs. James J. Walker denied herself to callers today as New York's former mayor and the second Mrs. Walker returned home after years of self-imposed exile abroad.

A maid at the Miami Beach home where Mrs. Janet Allen Walker has lived since she divorced Walker, on grounds of desertion, said this morning she was still in bed.

Asked when she could be seen, the maid replied:

"Mrs. Walker is not feeling very well."

After the Florida divorce, Walker married Betty Compton, former actress, at Cannes, France.

In-Laws' Wedding Is Forbidden

New Bedford, Oct. 30—State law and City Clerk R. A. Swan today blocked the plans of Joseph W. Symes, 44, to wed his erstwhile mother-in-law, Harriet Saxon, 62.

The license had been issued, but was recalled when Swan learned that Mrs. Saxon was the mother of Symes' first wife, Florence Saxon, who died in 1919. His second wife divorced him in 1932.

Symes and Mrs. Saxon had planned to wed on Saturday. They were under the impression Symes' second marriage destroyed their relationship.

Mrs. Saxon is the widow of a marrying justice of the peace. Her dead daughter's three children by Symes live with her in Pope street.

Gas-Gun Toting Urged by G-Man

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau of investigation, recommends tear gas instead of bullets for self-defense.

"A tear gas gun is just as effective in protecting a person against attack, and it's much safer for the average motorist or private citizen," he said today.

"A dose of tear gas will incapacitate a criminal. Firearms require a certain amount of technical skill in operation, whereas a gas gun can be used effectively with little practice."

STARS To Shine on GAME

BUT BOY STAR TWINKLES OUT

Somerville high football eleven is squirming in unrest as the boys prepare for the first schoolboy night football game in Greater Boston.

The apprehension results from a clash between the teams two star players, it was learned today.

The game will be played on November 7 against the strong Malden Catholic High School eleven, undefeated this year and scored upon but once.

Both Robert Buckley, faculty manager of football at Somerville, and Principal Harry L. Sears frankly admitted the night game would be played in an effort to make up a financial deficit.

In the after-supper tilt a week from tonight, however, Somerville will be greatly weakened by the loss of George Spartos, star left tackle, who, it was learned today, left school yesterday in a huff after refusing to apologize to a teacher.

Real Loss

Spartos and Frank Zammarchi, all-scholastic quarterback, were both declared ineligible last week, it was disclosed, because of a clash with a teacher.

Both were kept out of the Norwood game Saturday, won, never-the-less, by Somerville, 6 to 0.

Subsequently Zammarchi apologized to the teacher and was reinstated, but Spartos, declaring he had been unjustly disciplined, refused to apoloize, told the teacher what he thought of him and then announced his withdrawal from school.

"Spartos left school yesterday of his own accord," Principal Sears said today. "However, I have not given him a discharge card yet and shall not until I have heard from his parents."

All in Game

Coach Charlie Dickerman of Somerville admitted the loss will weaken the team, but said:

"It's all part of the game and I guess we'll have to do without him. You spend about two months developing fellows and then something like this happens and all your work is undone."

Before the night football game is definite, sanction of the Somerville school committee must be obtained, but a majority of the board had signified today they would favor it.

HARVARD BOY'S OWN STORY PINS BEATING ON CHUM

Involves "X"

The story, as George told it in his own defense, is as follows:

After the Harvard-Dartmouth game Saturday there was a reception in the room of M. J. Strauss and Reginald Wheeler, Jr., in Dunster House.

It was for friends of these roommates, George among them, and several young ladies were present, as house rules permitted. Altogether there were between 15 and 20 present.

Student X (the one named but not arrested) was the only one not in good condition and he was asked by the hosts to leave because of his condition from liquor.

After Student X had left, Strauss suggested that somebody should go along and see that X reached his own room safely.

George left the reception with this idea in mind and went to the foot of the stairs in Dunster House where he met Student X on his way out.

When he encountered Student X, the latter took a punch at him which George sidestepped. Student X then ran out of the building into the courtyard.

George remained standing in the hall at the foot of the stairs and three other students who were in the party came down from the [illegible]

"X" Grows Angry

These, George said, were Royal Victor and Cedric Francis, both of New York and roommates at Harvard, and Martin Victor of New York, brother of Royal and a student at Yale Law School.

Student X was said to have been very angry at having been requested to leave the party.

When the Victors and Francis reached the foot of the stairs, George said to them:

"What do you think of Student X? He just made a pass at me."

Royal Victor, looking over the transom into the yard, said:

"There's a fight out there."

The Victors and Francis ran out, leaving George in the hallway. He followed in a moment, walking slowly.

When the Victors and Francis reached the courtyard they saw Student X fighting with two men. They interfered as peacemakers, one pulling Student X away from Foster, the other pulling away the third man who later proved to be William A. Lawrence, night watchman at Dunster House and a member of the college police.

George maintains he had nothing to do even with breaking up the fight.

"Man Who Ran"

When the students had separated Student X, Foster and Lawrence, Student X ran out of the yard.

At this point, Thomas H. Quinn, Harvard senior and president of the Student Council appeared.

George says that at that time, Lawrence said "the man who did it" had run away.

According to George, he and his three companions did not know Lawrence was a member of the Harvard police and made Quinn identify him. They believed he was an outsider and wanted something done to him for trespassing.

Foster was standing at this time and none of the four students realized he had been seriously injured.

George insists that the only part the Victors and Francis had in the affair was to break up the fight, thus preventing further injury to the janitor, and that he himself was not even in it to that extent, but was merely an onlooker.

George's counsel, Malcolm Donald, an old friend of his family, and Richard C. Evarts, former Cambridge solicitor and candidate for the school committee, said their client was available for police questioning at any time. There is a possibility that George and Student X will be brought face to face before the police.

2d Harvard Boy Linked to Beating Found by American

The Boston Evening American today found the second Harvard student police are seeking to question in connection with the beating of Frank Foster, 67-year-old janitor of Harvard's Dunster House.

This youth, 21 years old and member of a wealthy and socially prominent family, was located by the American in a downtown Boston hotel with his father.

His parents hastened here by plane and retained counsel in the case.

The student is expected to submit to police questioning later. There is no charge against him.

Other information bearing directly on the case came exclusively into possession of this paper while Foster fought to live at Baker Memorial Hospital, and Eugene H. George, 20, of Milton, Harvard sophomore, was pleading not guilty to a charge of assault and battery on him, and while the Harvard Student Council, undergraduate governing body, was opening war on "excessive drinking" and recommending expulsion of the student or students guilty of the attack.

Most amazing of this new information was the statement of Captain John J. Canney, in charge of Cambridge inspectors, that attempts were being made to hamper police investigation of the case and that the head of a Cambridge private tutoring school for Harvard had been warned to "lay off" helping the authorities.

Captain Canney would not name the school nor divulge the identity of the person threatened.

The school, he said, is in Massachusetts avenue, and there yesterday, he revealed, police conferred for three hours wth attorneys representing George and the second student, and with Harvard students and others who were said to be witnesses of the attack.

George's arrest followed the breakup of this meeting.

After Captain Canney and Lieutenant Joseph Shannon had left the building, the school head answered a telephone call and was warned:

"Lay off aiding the police in this case."

George was arraigned in East Cambridge district court, pleaded not guilty through his counsel, Richard Evarts, and was released in $1000 bond for hearing November 14. He left the courthouse immediately.

Not only must any student implicated in the beating answer to the courts, but he probably will be expelled from Harvard, it was revealed in a recommendation voted by the Student Council.

DISCIPLINE URGED

Not only is expulsion recommended in the resolution, but it also urges that Harvard take immedite disciplinary action against students who "refuse to recognize their responsibility in the matter of excessive drinking."

At Baker Memorial Hospital today Foster was said to be in a critical condition from the beating administered to him Saturday night outside Dunster House.

Two other Harvard students and a graduate, now attending Yale Law school, are also involved in the case, according to police.

Advertising Boom Seen in Survey

By Universal Service

New York, Oct. 31—More than 70 per cent of the nation's principal advertisers have such faith in the business outlook that they are increasing their budgets, indicating an advertising boom for 1936, according to a survey reported by the magazine Sales Management.

One hundred companies ranking among the 250 largest advertisers, who spent $27,000,000 for advertising in 1934, were included in the survey.

Of these, 71 said their 1936 appropriations will be larger than those of this year; 25 per cent reported their budgets will be "about the same as 1935," and half of the 4 per cent who are cutting down their budgets are doing so only "because of limitation of productive capacity."

for the Democratic nomination for Governor that might conceivably retard the work and wages program."

As to whom the State House group might support for the Senate if he were not candidate, the Governor was decidedly reticent.

CONNERY STRONG

He was told Congressman William P. Connery had announced he would run for the Senate if Governor Curley did not.

"Congressman Connery would make a suprisnigly strong candidate," the Governor commented.

How about the reports the Roosevelt administration leaders were trying to get him to go along with State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley and split the gubernatorial and senatorial nominations.

"I have heard no such proposition," he replied.

Neither would the Governor discuss a report from Washington that Vice-President John A. Garner would step aside in the next national election and that a boom for Governor Curley for the place would follow.

RAPS CALIFORNIA TAX

Governor Curley said that on his trip from the coast to Chicago he observed unmistakable signs of returning prosperity.

"The one bad feature, however," he said, "was the utterly insane taxation program of some of the politicians in California. I'm afraid that unless the intelligent citizens of the state succeed in blocking the tax zealots that such damage will be done to the state that will take years to repair."

Gov. Curley and Mr. and Mrs. Donnelly, accompanied by Dr. Martin J. English, arived in Chicago this morning and were met by Mr. and Mrs. John Bremmer and Mrs. Leo Cummings, Chicago friends.

They will start back to Boston Friday afternoon, arriving on the Twentieth Century shortly before noon Saturday.

HUDSON DOCTOR UNSHAKEN AT 'TORCH' TRIAL

Under a fire of questions in cross-examination, Dr. Norman M. Hunter, former medical examiner at Hudson, clung steadfastly today in Middlesex superior court that Hudson's torch murder victim was burned alive.

Charged with the slaying of Daniel M. Crowley, West End laborer, Frank and Anthony DiStasion, Revere father and son, are on trial before Judge Nelson P. Brown and a jury.

Dr. Hunter, who examined the burned and broken body of Crowley in a lonely road near Lake Boone, Hudson, last May, was under cross-examination by Attorney William R. Scharton, counsel for the younger defendant.

When pressed by Scharton on a question that the identical fractures of Crowley's arms and legs might have been caused by being run over, Dr. Hunter said it was "possible, but not reasonable."

In his opening to the jury in the crowded courtroom before Judge Nelson P. Brown, Assistant District Attorney Daniel J. Doherty described in detail what the government hopes to prove.

He said that the murder of the unemployed laborer was "a deliberate plan to take a man's life, and the defendants acted as joint conspirators to effectuate a deliberate and understood end."

tive at the time the letter was written.

Mr. and Mrs. Mythen also were questioned regarding the sources of information that caused the mother, at least, to suspect that one or two persons on the Hill might have knowledge of what had happened to her son.

The parents were in conference with Assistant Attorney-General Henry P. Fielding, State Detective Frank Hale and Lieutenant Inspector John A. Dorsey, who are preparing the case for court inquest.

QUESTION "CULTISTS"

Secret questioning of wealthy residents of the Hill and members of the Bohemian cult was to follow the meeting with the parents. Social registerites who did not wish to appear at the State House were to be questioned in their homes.

As Fielding lacks summoning power and does not wish to embarrass residents of Beacon Hill who may be innocent, the questioning is to be secret.

Other than saying the questioning was to be carried out today, Fielding would not indicate the identity of those to be queried or the location of their homes.

Members of the Bohemian cult, designated by Fielding as a "fester on Beacon Hill," and strangely linked with young Mythen's disappearance and death, were also to be queried.

Investigators were confident that members of the cult could furnish information leading to solution of the case, but admitted that answers to their questions cannot be enforced.

They were confident, however, that the protection of secrecy will induce many cult members to talk freely.

Search will also be continued for the wealthy, middle-aged Beacon Hill resident, known to have entertained the youth on occasions before his disappearance and death.

The elderly man, investigators believe, can furnish them with a list of the youth's acquaintances on Beacon Hill.

33 SAVED AFTER GRIM BATTLE IN HIGH SEA

By Associated Press

Mulgrave, N. S., Oct. 31—Saved from death on Deadman Island when the British freighter Berwindlea was battered to pieces on its ragged rocks, 33 officers and crew of the vessel were safe ashore today. They were landed here by the salvage tug Foundation Franklin.

The rescue was accomplished on a storm-swept sea Sunday when great breakers crashed over the grounded vessel and broke her in two.

Besides the Halifax tug, the Japanese freighter England Maru had answered distress calls and Japenese seamen played a heroic part in the thrilling drama.

Six men of the Berwindlea's crew volunteered to row half the men to the tug and return for the remainder. With mountainous seas against them they were exhausted when they reached the Franklin.

Death awaited any tired man who put out on a sea like that and after a wireless consultation the captain of the England Maru sent one of his own lifeboats to take off the remaining men.

The Japanese volunteers were little fellows but by rowing two to an oar they forced in to the wreck, took off all aboard and transferred them to the Franklin.

The Berwindlea was outbound from Dalhousie, N. B., when she struck Deadman Island in the fog October 23.

Bridal Off, Teacher Sues Chelsea Man

Miss Sadia Frisch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Max Frisch of Chase street, Lynn, today filed suit in Salem superior court against Benjamin Bornstein of Chelsea. She claims he promised to marry her and, because of her confidence in his promise, she lent him $1950 without security. She asks the money be repaid.

In her bill, Miss Frisch, a teacher, says she became engaged to Bornstein last March and planned to marry him in June.

A month after the alleged engagement, she says, she lent him $350 for his Malden tobacco store.

Later, she alleges, she lent him $600 more and on May 14, an additional $1000. She adds a few months later the engagment was broken and she tried to collect from Bornstein, but received only $20.

Fog Lingers a Day, Then It May Rain

Fog, which for several days has blanketed the harbor of Greater Boston, will remain for at least another 24 hours, weather forecasters said today.

It is caused by the contact between a large area of polar air and the warmer air near the sea surface. The resulting condensation creates fog, which will dissipate into rain.

During all of October, which was the driest in years, only .32 of an inch of rain fell, with normal rainfall for the period 2.7 inches. The warmest day, the 23rd, the temperature reached 78, and two days later it was the coldest, with thermometers registering 32.

Beverly Man Loses Legs Under Train

Herbert S. Cranton of Crescent avenue, Beverly, who was found last night with both legs severed below the knee, on the tracks at Beverly depot, is in critical condition at Beverly Hospital today.

Cranton, conscious when found, said he tried to cross the tracks and stepped out from behind some standing box-cars into the path of an approaching train.

Four in Taunton Mayoralty Race

Taunton, Dec. 31 — Taunton city primaries will be November 12, when the voters will nominate two of four candidates for mayor.

The aspirants are John E. Welch, city solicitor; Arthur Poole, municipal council member; Harold E. Cole, former representative, and Theodore Paull.

The primary is non-partisan. According to municipal election ordinances, only two candidates may be nominated.

Film Actor Dies; Mae Marsh Sinks

Hollywood, Oct. 31—As Gordon Westcott, 31-year-old character actor, died in a hospital from a fractured skull he received last Sunday during a polo game, a late report concerning Mae Marsh stated her condition is "very poor—almost hopeless." The former star of silent pictures is suffering from gangrene poisoning resulting from a ruptured appendix.

Westcott never regained consciousness after his accident.

Cyclist Dead, Girl Dying in Crash

By Associated Press

Waterville, Me., Oct. 31 — Miss Winnie Beaulieu, 21, of Fairfield, was in a critical condition here today from injuries received as a motorcycle crashed into a pole, killing one and seriously injuring another, in Fairfield last night.

Hospital attendants said they held little hope for her recovery.

Donald House, 21, of Skowhegan, motorcycle operator, was killed.

Ralph Sites, 20, of Skowhegan, suffered head injuries.

McCULLY, TAMKIN, SULLIVAN AND BURKE STRONG

That the public may know the background of the 29 candidates for the three openings on the school committee, the Boston Evening American will print here each day the pictures and brief biographies of the aspirants. The voting on these candidates will be next Tuesday, November 5. Four of the candidates are sketched below. Others will be described in following issues.

Melvin A. McCully, one of the best known of the Boston College graduates campaigning for election to the School Committee, is the only Charlestown candidate.

Large committees are supporting his candidacy in every ward.

Melvin A. McCully

Mr. McCully is a graduate of both Boston College High School and Boston College. He is employed by the Boston & Me. railroad and is a member of Bunker Hill Council, Knights of Columbus, and Boston College Club of Charlestown.

He advocates a program of intramural sports in the Boston schools similar to those now sponsored by officials in other large cities. He has a host of friends in the ranks of organized labor and anticipates substantial support from union men.

BACKED BY WARD 17

Paul T. Burke

Paul T. Burke of Dorchester is 29 years old, married, and the father of three children. He is an attorney and a graduate of Suffolk law school and is grand knight of James E. Hayes Council, Knights of Columbus.

Burke is president of the Boston Civic Guild and is a member of the Ward 17 Democratic Club, which has indorsed him, and of the Columbus Club and is one of the most prominent members of Boston Typographical Union, No. 13. He has a large following in labor circles.

He has been actively campaigning for several months and is being supported by a large number of South Boston and Roxbury groups in addition to those of his own section.

Hayward Tamkin

Hayward Tamkin of 1810 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, candidate for School Committeeman, is director and legal advisor of the Boston University Legal Aid Bureau and has a host of friends among students and graduates.

He is also an instructor in the Boston Center for Adult Education and the Boston Parliamentary Law Club. He is an active member of the Twentieth Century Club.

Mr. Tamkin holds the rank of lieutenant, quartermaster corps, in the U. S. Army reserves and is a member of the Quartermaster's Corps Association and the Reserve Officers Association.

He is a member of the bar, practising in both the State and Federal courts, is active in the affairs of the B'nai B'rith, and is a member of the Voluntary Defenders Committee. He holds the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education from Boston University and is also the holder of a B. U. Law School degree. Many leading educators are supporting him.

J. G. Sullivan

Joseph G. Sullivan of 107 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, whose name is the first on the ballot for the School Committee, was elected last year to the Suffolk County Board of Apportionment and has been actively engaged in that work for some time past.

He is one of the best known residents of Roxbury and in addition has a host of friends in the South End where he resided for a number of years.

He was educated at Boston University and Suffolk Law School.

Mr. Sullivan is a member of St. James Council, Knights of Columbut, Boston Lodge of Elks, the St. James Associates and the Old Cove Associates. He has been endorsed by the Ward 12 Democratic Club.

More than 1100 friends and supporters are conducting a house-to-house canvass of Boston in support of his candidacy.

He is married, the father of three children, and is employed as an engineer by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Coolidge Friend Dies, 3d in Week

Northampton, Oct. 31—Arthur S. Green, 60, for 35 years janitor of Edwards Church, which Calvin Coolidge attended when in this city, died of a heart attack today.

He is the third friend of the former president, to die here within a week. Green was found dead in bed in his room in the church building.

Dr. Edward W. Brown, who was family physician of the Coolidges, died Friday of a heart attack.

Albert H. Carpenter, reporter, died Monday. He played many a game of cribbage with Coolidge when both occupied offices in the Masonic building. Carpenter also succumbed to a heart ailment.

FACTS

UNIVERSAL SERVICE

Washington, Oct. 31—President Roosevelt, in a message to Congress last February, asked an appropriation of 4000 million dollars for public works, "to end the dole"

Eight months after the appropriation was granted, Works Program Administration officials today said the administration had spent 1227 million dollars for relief so far this year, compared to 1013 millions in the corresponding period of 1934.

The President fixed November 1 as the day the dole was to end. WPO officials say they have yet to find jobs for two million men.

Tall Tale

Carlisle, Pa., Oct. 31—Edward Schmohl and two companions went out to fish.

A flock of wild geese settled on the stream just as they cast their lines.

They ran and walked four miles back to Carlisle for their guns, returned, and bagged the birds—four each.

British Firm Plans Atlantic Flights

By Associated Press

London, Oct. 31—Sir Eric Geddes, chairman of Imperial Airways, announced today that the company may be in a position to carry out experimental Atlantic flights next year.

Speaking at the company'slannua meeting, the chairman said Imperial Airways has "under consideration a flying boat of normal characteristics but suficient range to fly the Atlantic."

Resistance

By Associated Press

Kansas City, Oct. 31—Betty Ann Painter, pretty "Little Theater" actress, stopped by a motorcycle officer, protested, cajoled, flattered, smiled—all to no avail. She went to the station.

"She was doing 45 miles an hour, and—" said the officer, remembering, "resisted."

That was too much for the dainty prisoner.

"Oh, no," she retorted. "You did all the resisting."

U. S. LOAN PLAN PROTESTED BY SHOE UNION

Haverhill, Oct. 31—War on use of federal money for construction of plants to attract industries from one city to another was declared here today.

Officials of United Shoe and Leather Workers Union expressed their vigorous protest of loans inducing factory removals in telegrams sent to Washington.

Haverhill union officials are "up in arms" over the report that the town of Hampton, N. H., has applied for federal assistance on the 70-30 basis for the construction of a shoe manufacturing plant to be occupied by a Haverhill firm.

Alleged extra inducements of non-union conditions and freedom from labor troubles being assured at the proposed New Hampshire plant has aroused the ire of virtually every shoe worker in this city and, if necessary, the Haverhill district council of the United Shoe & Leather Workers Union will take the issue directly to President Roosevelt.

In wires to President Roosevelt, Secretary Ickes, Federal Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Senator David I. Walsh and Congressman William P. Connery, sent yesterday the district council protested against the allotment of federal money for non-union shops.

According to reports here, plans for the New Hampshire factory which, according to reports, will be operated by the Simon Shoe Company, one of Haverhill's largest units, have been drawn and submitted to the federal relief administration. The New Hampshire townspeople, who allegedly have been assured of government aid on the proposition, are now proposing to raise funds from their citizens to finance the 30 per cent, which portion of the cost the town of Hampton must assume.

Two other Haverhill firms are seriously considering a move to vacate the city, reliable reports state. Although federal funds are not involved in the contemplated removal of the two firms it is said that they have been assured by authorities of a New Hampshire town of freedom from labor troubles.

Jersey Indicts 10 In Raid Killing

By Associated Press

Elizabeth N. J., Oct. 31—The grand jury which investigated the fatal shooting of Mrs. Sophie Crempa, 45, of Scotch Plains, during a raid by sheriff's deputies, returned six indictments to Judge McGrath today.

Indictments were reported to name 10.

Seven deputies attempted to serve warrants on Mrs. Crempa and her husband, John, September 26. In the shooting, Mrs. Crempa dropped to the porch, dead.

Seven deputies were arrested on complaints charging murder, signed by Kamelia Crempa, 19-year-old daughter of the family.

Plane Drops Bundle in Jail Yard

Chicago, Oct. 31—Prison officials at Statesville were confronted with a mystery today when a plane zoomed audaciously low and dropped a package in the prison yard.

A wall-guard watched in astonishment as the plane appeared from the northeast, dropped low as it flew over the prison and then rose as it disappeared. The guard notified the guardroom and a search for the pacakage was begun.

Fire Destroys Home, Barn

Campus 'Free Love' Charge Probed at Minnesota U.

By International News Service

Minneapolis, Oct. 31—"Free love," as allegedly practiced on the University of Minnesota campus, was the object of a student investigation today.

The campus buzzed with excitement as the student council announced it would investigate the charge attributed to N. T. Mears, St. Paul business man.

"At least a dozen senior girls and men are living together, although not married," Mears was alleged to have told the Minnesota Temperance Movement State Council.

He said he received the information from his son, Colbert, a freshman.

Son Denies It

"These conditions are well known among the students," Mears said his son told him. "It is not uncommon for them to discuss their relationships."

"I never told anything like that to my father," Colbert told International News Service today. He added, hesitantly and blushing:

"I know of no such cases. As far as I'm concerned I know nothing of it and I have nothing to say."

"Perhaps it was your brother?" he was asked.

"Robert? He never said anything like that either," he replied.

Robert is an advanced student in the University Medical College. He refused to be interviewed.

Deans Seek Proof

The elder Mears was not to be found today. Yesterday, however, after his charges had aroused a storm of protest from university officials, he denied making them and then, later, said he had not attributed them to his son, but to "hearsay."

Anna Dudley Blite, dean of women, indignantly denied the allegations.

Dean of Men Otis C. McCreery indicated he would ask Mears to corroborate his charges.

N. H. Subsidiary Files Similar Plea

By Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 31 (AP)—The Connecticut Company, operator of street electric cars and buses, filed a petition in United States District Court today for permission to reorganize under Section 77B of the Federal Bankruptcy Act. The company is a subsidiary of the New Haven road.

HUGHES TO ACT ON GUFFEY LAW

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 31 — Moving swiftly to balk the government, counsel for James W. Carter notified the department of justice today that it will seek an injunction against enforcement of the Guffey coal act from Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the Supreme Court.

This action followed a surprise move today in which Carter's attorneys thrust the constitutional issue before the high court on a petition for review of their unsuccessful efforts in the District of Columbia Supreme Court to halt collection of the 15 per cent tonnage tax.

Chief Justice Hughes was expected to reserve decision on the application for injunction, possibly referring the question to the entire court of nine justices.

Successor Sought For O'Hara Dog

Providence, Oct. 31—Convinced here missing Boston bull terrier, Sox, is gone for good, Mrs. Walter E. O'Hara is now trying to get a similarly marked dog to raise as his successor.

Despite a widely publicized hunt since last Friday, no trace of the missing dog has been found, although scores of dogs resembling him have been brought to Mrs. O'Hara.

Mrs. O'Hara, wife of the managing director of Narragansett Park, plans to visit Mrs. Don Smith, from whom she purchased Sox, in the hope of finding a pet similar to the last dog.

PRISONERS OF OGPU DEMAND THEY BE GIVEN FOOD

By GEORGE KITCHIN
CHAPTER 38

We are scheduled to resume our march at eight a. m. Our convoy soldiers were thoroughly drunk when they awakened us.

At ten o'clock we were finally all assembled and the rollcall started. It revealed that two Cossacks and the whole group of thieves were missing.

They had taken advantage of the drinking orgy to make their getaway.

Our host, still somewhat tipsy, stood a little way off with a knowing smile on his face.

His long discussion with Saveliev would indicate that he had had his hand in the preparation of the escape, but he was not afraid of being accused, as the convoy had partaken of his free liquor and had thus become his accomplices.

He was quite sure of himself and counseled the convoy contemptuously to "try to find the wind in the open field."

The chairman of the local soviet did not show up at all. He and his associates, together with the head of the village militia, continued their carousal at the soviet hall, whence came curses, shouts and abuse.

Guards Vent Anger

There was nothing to be done. The convoy-chief angrily gave orders to start. It was cold and a disagreeable wind blew in our faces.

The sky was covered with threatening clouds. The sobering soldiers marched dismally alongside of us and gave vent to their anger by abusing the petty criminals.

Certainly they were not in an enviable situation. On the third day of the march eight prisoners were missing, all the money spent, and all the food gone. They were responsible to the camp administration and would be taken to task.

How they intended to feed themselves and the 300 prisoners during the rest of the march was a mystery.

As usual, the first half of the way was rapidly traversed. Our road lay through several small villages. At the entrance of each one of these we were met by pale village children dressed in rags and wearing huge felt boots discarded by their elders.

No peasants were about. They had all been mobilized for the transportation of timber. The peasants' wives and mothers stood on their porches, looked at us compassionately, shook their heads and threw bread to us.

The convoy, fearing further escapes, would not allow us to stop at the village or to drink water from the village wells.

They told us to eat snow instead. We were to march 35 kilometers that day. About mid-day we stopped for a long rest.

The convoy-chief suggested that I, as a prisoner with penal camp experience, take entire charge, assume responsibility for 15 members of the "intelligentsia," and arrange for their food and lodgings.

March in Agony

I promptly accepted his proposal on condition that we would not be bothered with escorts and that we be given free choice in the selection of our quarters.

We marched less briskly the second half of the way. After 30 kilometers I was again overcome by the familiar feeling of fatigue, ain in the kn es, and a peculiar ghtness.

I tried to replenish my energy by unching bits of bread and sugar. t 9 in the evening we reached our illage.

It was the last settlement in the orthern area. The next day we were to enter the territory occupied by the Komi people.

The vast Komi territory is but very sparsely populated by the Zyryan race. The Zyryans are descendants of Finnish tribes which were pushed north by the Slavs. They settled in the impenetrable forests and swamps, forcing the Slavs to leave them alone. The very name of the people, "Komi," means "the pursued."

The Komi people had been Christianized by Greek-Orthodox missionaries and monks. Then came Russian traders who gave them manufactured goods, especially alcohol, in exchange for furs.

Alcohol brought the usual dread results; the people were dying out, and at the time of the Bolshevik revolution they numbered only some 350,000.

Our last stop on Russian territory was marked by the escape of 10 city bums who managed to make their getaway in spite of the renewed vigilance of the guards.

Our total number now was reduced by 18.

In the morning, it was found that the village co-operative store had no supplies to give us in exchange for the note which our convoy-chief had procured with great difficulty from the village soviet.

The convoy was panic-stricken. What could they do? We were far from telephone or telegraph lines. They decided to go on.

The hungry criminal gang loudly protested during the roll-call and threats were made to report the convoy for spending the money and food on drink.

My group was in a gloomy mood. We had almost no supplies. Having shared all our food the night before, we had nothing except a little sugar, lard and garlic.

I had recourse to the monk who persuaded the recalcitrants that the dear Lord would not leave us alone or let us famish.

We put our faith in his promises and started off. We had only 18 kilometers to go that day.

The Zyryan people proved very kind-hearted. As we passed through villages the criminal group loudly shouted "bread, give us some bread," and stretched our their hands to the Zyryan women.

The women rushed back into their houses, brought out some barley cakes and buns in their aprons and threw them into our midst. The criminals pounced on the breadcakes like wild animals.

One old woman ran for a long way alongside of our group. She mumbled something in her native tongue, pointed to my feet, lamented and wept.

"God Only Hope"

Finally she rushed up to me, took off her thick, embroidered, woolen mittens and handed them to me with a sob. I was deeply touched by this manifestation of motherly affection.

Later on these mittens rendered me faithful service and I still have one of them, violet-colored with a primitive design in bright yellow and green.

The monk immediately took advantage of the situation to reassure the doubters of Heavenly Providence by citing the mitten incident as an example.

"He had no loves and the Lord sent him mittens," he said with conviction. "God is with us and will not abandon us."

We wondered at the large size of the Zyryan cottages as contrasted with the small Russian peasant cabins. The Zyryans did not believe in sparing timber.

The corners of the cottages were all painted dark red and some were decorated with fancy balconies. The windows were disproportionately small. The logs in the walls were well cut and accurately fitted.

We noticed that many cottages had brooms standing outside their doors. The Zyryans had remained true to the Finnish traditions of honesty. They had no locks on their doors and a broom left on the doorstep indicated that the owners of the cottage were out.

Time flew; we left behind one kilometer after another. Our group marched on boldly and was kept in good humor by Korolkov, our invaluable wit.

We soon reached our destination, a large village with a beautiful boarded-up church.

We had no difficulty finding quarters for the night. The monk, the priest and the Pole immediately went to look for food. Our hostess gave us a pot of boiled potatoes, the only food she could scrape together. We paid for it with a pair of trousers.

After an hour and a half the Pole came back with an empty sack. Our countenances fell, we had only one hope left—in the Lord.

We began making bets. As the daylight dwindled and the clergy did not come back, the odds were five to two in favor of divine intercession, and when it had grown quite dark they were ten to one.

About 8 o'clock we heard the monk's voice on the porch and in another minute he was with us.

He placed a jug of milk on the table and pulled some treasures out of his sack consisting of freshly baked cakes with salt fish stuffing, millet bread, potatoes, cottage cheese, two partridges and some dried mushrooms.

Bridal Feast

We lifted the hero in our arms and tossed him up to the ceiling again and again in grateful triumph. He humbly accepted our exultation.

It appeared that he owed his success to the fact that the local priest had been deported and the village was left without a spiritual head.

The peasant women prevailed on our clergy to read the evening service in church, to christen two babies and to wed a young couple whose parents had forbidden any but a church wedding.

The newlyweds, overjoyed at the unexpected stroke of luck, were the principal donors to our fund of supplies.

During the feast that followed the convoy-soldiers came to our cottage to ask our advice about finding food. Their situation was worse than that of the others.

The criminals had not eaten for 48 hours and demanded food.

There was even a real riot in one of the cottages. The convoy-soldiers realized their guilt and tried to meet the situation by persuasion rather than by force.

They told the prisoners that the chairman of the local soviet had left the village in search of supplies and that bread would be distributed in the morning.

There was no truth in this promise. The prisoners were doomed to bitter disappointment. In order to get the convicts to come out of their cottages in the morning, the convoy told them that the bread would be handed out after the roll-call.

At 7 a. m. we were already standing in formation in the village square. The roll-call was made and to the convoy's great relief we were all there. Then came the command to start.

Rioting began at once.

"Where is our bread? We can't start without bread. We won't go!" came from the ranks.

The peasants hesitated, but the criminals would not listen. They were promised their bread in the morning and bread they must have. No bread—no march.

Our little convoy-chief became furious.

"What do you mean you won't march," he cried, pulling out his gun. "Remember this," and he shot into the air. "And now: attention! Go!"

HEARST'S SON TO SPEAK ON AIR TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

Renewal of the "Town Hall Meeting" series of broadcasts takes place (WBZ) tonight between 9:30 and 10:30, with William Randolph Hearst, Jr., as the principal guest.

Dorothy Thompson, noted author, and Dr. Clark Eichelberger, League of Nations Association director, are also to be presented.

"N. F. T."

This particular program is the same striking effort which won so many patrons last year. It resulted in congratulatory expressions by mail from listeners all over the nation. Further, it is not a commercial feature, being staged as a sustaining highlight by the National Broadcasting Company. Much of the praise inspired by the broadcast made known the appreciation of the air audience for the liberalistic open-forum type of offering, with vital social, economic and political questions up for discussion by prominent professional and business leaders of the country.

One more of the impressive Smith College musical half-hours (WBZ) has the 8:30 to 9 o'clock spotlight this evening. Gilbert Ross, concert violinist, comes to the "mike" for a guest star solo performance. John Duke will attend to the piano accompaniment.

Mary Boland brings a selected scene from "Jubilee" to the weekly Rudy Vallee hour of varieties (WEEI) when it's 8 o'clock tonight. Josephine Baker, well known Negro singer just returned from abroad, Eddie Garr, promising young impersonator, and will Aubray, singing comedian, round out the personality line-up slated to support Rudy.

100 Jobs Saved For Month Longer

One hundred Bostonians who expected to go home tonight without jobs were granted a respite today of one month by the civil service commission.

They are welfare department employes, temporarily on jobs covered by a civil service list, for which examinations were held several weeks ago.

Upon request of Mayor Mansfield the commission today granted a new extension of a month.

Every week the Boston Evening American awards a series of prizes to those correctly solving "Movie Mixups." Included in these awards are a total of 40 Automatic radios, table models, with all new 1936 features including the new metal tube, etc. Cash awards totaling $150 and 300 guest tickets are also distributed free.

All you have to do to win is correctly identify the movie stars above. They appear at the twin theaters, The Paramount and Fenway, where you will view "The Payoff" and "Ship Cafe." Unscramble their identifications from the batch of mixed up letters near the cartoon likenesses. Mail your entire week's solutions to: The Movie Mixups Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Accuracy, neatness, and originality in presentation (not too fancy) are deciding factors in winning any of these awards.

By special arrangement with the Automatic Radio Mfg. Co., of Boston, exclusive radio manufacturers in New England, the Boston Evening American will give away, absolutely free, a Grand Award consisting of the new 1936 all-wave, nine all metal tube, Automatic Console Radio with "Vision Ray," radio's most sensational invention, which actually "sees" your station selections!

You need not be a weekly winner, to win this Grand Award. Just send in your "Movie Mixups" weekly, and if they conform to specifications the judges will award this Automatic Console Radio to you, at the end of the radio tie up.

BIRTHDAY FOR QUADS

Alphabet Boys 'Goin' on Seven'

By Associated Press

Beaumont, Tex., Oct. 31—Four quadruplet brothers, A., B., C. and D. Perricone, swelled their respective barrel-like chests today—they were six years old—and tomorrow could add, "Goin' on seven."

They were much more interested in four three-layer cakes their mother had baked for their birthday party than in Halloween pranks or prixies, ghosts and goblins.

The quads, Anthony, Bernard, Carl and Donald, better known by their initials, were determined to behave themselves—even the nonconformist Bernard declaring mysteriously, "If we don't the witch will come g t all four of us and take us back."

This was quite a concession from Bernard, who rebelled against going to school—until his brothers' joyful preparations finally won him over.

Bernard, the individualist of the four, was the last to walk and talk, said his mother, Mrs. M. Perricone, adding:

"B was the slightest of the quads and he's the smartest.

"I believe Dr. Dafoe was right in saying the smallest of the Dionne quintuplets would turn out to be the smartest."

The Perricone quads are the only such group of boys known to be living in the United States.

The Keys quads of Oklahoma and the Morlok quads of Michigan are all girls.

Prof. Kimball's Widow Dies

N. J. CANDIDATE QUOTES HEARST

By Universal Service

Freehold, N. J., Oct. 31—The termination of W. R. Hearst to leave California because of the high income tax there was used here today to help the campaign of Sheriff Howard Height, candidate for the State Senate.

Height is making his campaign issue the elimination of unnecessary taxes. He told the voters:

"When California loses the most distinguished American private citizen in the person of William Randolph Hearst because of the state income tax, the incident is surely strong evidence of the correctness of my stand against any such tax or any other new tax.

"New Jersey needs new people and new capital and the best way to atract them is by adding no new taxes and reducing old ones."

Chicago Makes Bid For Film Industry

Chicago, Oct. 31 (US)—Chicago had today extended an official invitation for Hollywood's motion picture industry to come here if California's taxes are too burdensome.

The invitation was given by the City Council after William Randolph Hearst had announced that high taxes will compel him to spend less time in California and a number of movie stars had indicated that they will have to find new homes.

PWA PROGRAM IS HALTED AT CITY LINES

(This is the 23d in a series on the federal relief breakdown in Massachusetts.)

By JOHN H. NOONAN AND ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

The Massachusetts Public Works Department, under Governor Curley's work-and-wages plans, submitted projects to the Federal WPA authorities, calling for employment of 42,000 men.

Not one man has been put to work on these projects by the federal relief authorities, although the projects received WPA approval.

The state officials expected work would begin October 1.

Until recently told to split the projects into separate items by cities and towns, instead of by counties, and to trim the program 30 per cent, the state authorities expected full approval.

They had been left entirely in the dark, as week after week passed, as to the attitude of the federal authorities.

NEW CREWS NEEDED

This splitting-up of the program among the cities and towns means, in addition to a huge mass of detail work, that new crews have to be organized when a project passes over a municipal boundary.

Use of relief workers of one municipality inside the boundaries of another city or town is barred, except under special conditions, by a WPA rule.

Moreover, under this federal regulation, the relief workers of the large cities, where there are few miles of state highways, cannot be used on these Public Works Department projects.

This rule bars the needy in Boston from any consideration for jobs on one-quarter of the entire WPA program in Massachusetts.

The Public Works Department WPA program, which is distinct from the programs of the various cities and towns, may be summarized as follows:

Highway sidewalks, $4,000,000 and 15,000 men.

Farm to market roads, $11,000,000 and 12,000 men.

Roadside improvements, $5,500,000 and 15,000 men.

In the first place, the state proposed laying sidewalks along state highways, on which from 10,000 to 12,000 WPA workers would be employed. On the same projects, the state planned to employ 5000 men at private-industry wages, to finish the sidewalks for which the WPA workers would prepare the foundations.

JOBS FOR 1200

As the WPA delayed week after week, the department of public works found jobs for 1200 men finishing sidewalks for which the foundation work had already been done with state money.

This work is in Adams, Agawam, Springfield and West Springfield, Northboro, West Boylston, Worcester, Natick, Newton, Framingham, Revere, Salem, Swampscott, Lynn, East Boston, Merrimac, Lynnfield, Dedham, Dartmouth, Somerset, Whitman, Haverhill and Rockland.

The number of men so employed is now reduced to 850 and is dwindling. The employment of the entire 5000 by the state awaits the release of WPA funds.

MORE DELAYS

When the WPA starts, the federal portion of these sidewalk projects can be done well into January, but the state workmen cannot lay the surface materials after the middle of December, unless the winter is exceptionally mild.

Farm-to-market roads means gravel roads in outlying districts. State officials, at this late date, are unaware as to how many WPA workmen are to be employed on these jobs, for which the original plans called for hiring 12,000. A cut of at least 30 per cent is certain.

As for the roadside improvement projects, a cessation due to winter weather will be necessary in a few weeks—and the WPA has not even begun the work yet.

The last move of the federal authorities was a request that the cities and towns supply materials and tools for these projects, if possible, and all reported back that they were not in a position financially to do so.

(More of the true story of Federal relief in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Hunt Club Trials Draw Many To Sumner Pingree Estate

By BETTY ALDEN

THOUGH most outdoor affairs must wait for fine weather, it is proverbial that horse events, races, hunts, hunt meets, and even society horse shows, are run off "rain or shine." So it seems the weather man is a little piqued at the independence of the horsey crowd and arranges some pretty nasty days just for spite . . .

MRS. FRANCIS APPLETON

The competitors in several horse shows this season have been compelled to go riding around in the rain, without the usual musical accompaniment that the phrase implies, and for the past two seasons, at least, the largest event of the hunting season, the championship hunter trials and the hound trails, held every fall in Hamilton, has been run off in a pea soup fog and occasional chilly rain . . .

The damp, cold weather had only one visible effect, however, upon the horse lovers who gathered yesterday for the trials, in which the leading New England hunt clubs competed . . . Almost every one of the women spectators wore a pair of semi-dilapidated shoes which they did not mind soaking in the wet grass, but their riding attire and country tweed outfits were just as smart and stylish as ever . . . Rivalry between the entries and performance of riders and mounts alike was just as keen, and the enthusiasm of the spectators left nothing to be desired . . .

A handful of practical-minded souls made use of gray felt gaiters, bright plaid woolen hosiery, and even small fur turbans to shield themselves from the dampness . . .

Since only amateur riders in hunt uniforms were eligible to compete in the afternoon events, the broad, rolling fields of Flying Horse Farm, the Sumner Pingree estate, formed a picturesque scene as hundreds of prominent hunting enthusiasts arrived there after hurrying from luncheon at the Myopia Hunt Club . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Appleton (Joan Eggleston), just back from a European honeymoon, wore riding clothes of impeccable style and strolled around with their hounds on leashes . . .

Even spending the afternoon in the Hamilton countryside did not relieve Ada Simpson of the perplexing problem of untangling all the engagements on her social calendar, for her boy friends followed her there to make certain she could attend the Ballet this evening before going on to Kay Day's dance . . . Ada was with her mother, Mrs. Charles P. Rimmer, both attractive in brownish tweeds . . .

Miss Mary Curtis in Green

MRS. N. PENROSE HALLOWELL, Jr. (Priscilla Choate), herself an accomplished equestrienne, watched the prowess of others as she stood with friends on the sidelines . . . Mrs. James Jackson had a few breathless moments as her debutante daughter, Madeleine, rode her horse expertly over the difficult course and Betty Dumaine and Mrs. George Timmins of Groton were naturally among the interested spectators . . .

Miss Mary Curtis wore another of her favorite green ensembles, so nice with her Titian locks . . , We also encountered Dorothy Preston, Mrs. John Yerxa, very attractive in robin's egg blue tweed; Mrs. Robert Homans, hovering protectingly over Sylvia Warren before the latter's turn to ride; Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Child, prominent members of the Norfolk Hunt; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Chalifoux, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cameron Burrage, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Alley and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Smith . . .

Betty Bird Clark of the Millwood Hunt Club quietly hoped that her companions from Millwood could capture the coveted award . . . The same club uniform, which incidentally is of hunter's green, in contrast to the conventional pink, was worn by Dean Wheatley as he put Cholo, his large white hunter, through its paces in the ring and over the outside course . . .

Many Debs in Attendance

MRS. HOWLAND SEABURY was a colorful figure against the drab foggy landscape in her scarlet and blue plaid coat and both Mrs. Lawrence Coolidge and Mrs. George Batchelder wore bright colored "respectable" raincoats . . . We also encountered Eleanor Williams in her picturesque whipper-in costume; Pat Preston, Anne Howard and Marie Stevenson, an animated trio, who were joined from time to time by other debs, including Mary Ross, Nancy Cassels and Marietta Howe . . . Anne Ayer, whose cousins, uncles and aunts are all closely identified with the affairs of the Myopia Hunt Club, wore a comfortable three-piece suit of rust woolen . . . Mrs. William Endicott combined plum and deep blue in her outfit and another bright figure was Kay Winthrop in pale blue tweed . . .

Isabella Grandin who rides with the Groton Hunt was intent on watching each event and the Cohasset colors were admirably represented by Hugh Bancroft and Mrs. Thomas James . . . Mrs. Joe Woods, Betty Soule, Phyllis Forbes, Esther Proctor, Mrs. William Coburn, Mrs. Frank Hopewell, Virginia Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bramwell Shaw, Mrs. Oliver Wolcott with her daughter Helen; Mrs. Harrison Reynolds, Mrs. Edward MacNichol, Mrs. Richard C. Storey, Jr., Eleanor Sears, Miss Alice Thorndike, Marileeds Heard, Mrs. Eldon McLeod of Dedham, Sally White Houghton, Anne Dick, Mr. and Mrs. George Bates, Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis, Jr., Mrs. John C. Phillips in an attractive outfit of pale green with yellow; Marian McKean, Mrs. Galbraithe Mitchell were all doing their own bit of silent cheering for their friends in the rodeo . . .

NORTH SHORE Leader Attends Trials for Hunt Meet

MRS. GEORGE W. SMITH AND "BEAUTY"

MRS. GEORGE W. SMITH took Beauty, one of her prize dogs to the trials which the leading New England hunt clubs participated in yesterday on Flying Horse Farm, the Sumner Pingrees' North Shore estate.

Pourers for Hospital Tea

MRS. WILLIAM O. MANN, Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, Mrs. Conrad Wesselhoeft and Mrs. Elwyn D. Preston will be the pourers at the tea which is to be given for the wives of the trustees of the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals, at the home of Mrs. J. Emmons Briggs on Beacon street, tomorrow.

The tea is being given by the Hospitals' Aid Association, and although there will be no speaker the topic of discussion will undoubtedly be the forthcoming concert of the Don Cossacks at Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, November 24, which is to benefit the hospitals.

Mrs. Arthur J. Crockett, president of the aid, will receive with Mrs. Briggs and among those who plan to attend are Mesdames Henry Grew, George Glidden, Talbot Aldrich, Arthur B. Chapin, B. Preston Clark, Leon Crockett, A. McKay Fraser, N. H. Garrick, Henry S. Grew, A. G. Howard, Henry B. Humphrey, Wesley T. Lee, H. C. Petterson, C. Wesley Sewell, John P. Sutherland, Thomas E. Chandler, Charles A. Eaton, Frederick L. Good, William A. Parke and Benjamin J. Schoolman of Brookline.

Also Mesdames Forrest T. Bangs of Belmont, Daniel L. Brown of Milton, Charles T. Howard, Jerome Preston, Walter R. Whiting of Hingham, Louis J. Hunter, Gordon M. Morrison, Thomas H. Peterson, Samuel K. Philips, Edwin W. Smith, William L. Krieger of Wollaston, Horace Packard of Easton and William A. Barron, Jr., of Wellesley.

Four Debutantes Make Bow

Edith and Margaret Sperry Honored at Luncheon

HALLOWEEN may be a day of hob goblins and fright to those who believe the fairy stories, but to the four debutantes who make their social bows today, it is an occasion for laughter and dancing.

Before this evening is over the young social set will have had opportunity to sample all three of the most popular forms of presentation party.

This noon Mrs. Marcy L. Sperry gave a luncheon at the Milton Club in honor of her two daughters, Miss Edith and Miss Margaret Sperry.

Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Capper were the hosts at a tea for their daughter, Miss Peggy Capper, at the Country Club.

And this evening the ballroom of the Algonquin Club will resound to the lilting rhythm of dance music as the many guests trip the light fantastic at Miss Katherine Gardner Day's party.

Though Miss Edith and Miss Margaret Sperry selected quite contrasting costumes, they both have a leaning toward lavender orchids. Edith wore a dress of green lame made with long sleeves and an ankle length skirt, a black felt hat and an orchid corsage. Margaret was in brown brocaded silk, accented with an amber belt, a velvet hat of the same color and an orchid corsage.

A group of debs and post debs assisted the Sperrys as hostesses at the large luncheon table. These were Betty Reece, Jane Whiting, Charlotte Smith, Polly Wardwell, Betty Watson and Jane Forbes.

Both Edith and Margaret Sperry have been abroad for the past two years, studying and traveling. In this country they both attended Milton Academy, then Edith studied at the May school, Beaver Country Day and the Holton-Arms in Washington, D. C., while Margaret attended St. Timothy's in Catonsville, Md.

Other parties are being planned for them in Boston as they will not make their debuts in Washington where the family customarily spends the winter.

The tea tables at the Country Club were decorated in true Halloween fashion for Peggy Capper's tea dance. The cloth was the color of the orange harvest moon and small grotesque lights shown from the openings in pumpkin faces. Miss Capper wore a formal afternoon gown of silver cloth with a corsage of white gardenias. Her mother, Mrs. Francis W. Clapper, also wore white gardenias with her black crepe de chene.

Peggy Capper and Kathering Day Presented

Pourers at the tea tables were Edith Lewis, Anne Capper, Olive Perry, Ursula Coues, Helen Hubbard, Leslie Eustis, Dorothy Knowles, Margaret Rice, Reinette Plimpton, Marjorie Danforth, Joan Sagendorph and Sally Scudder.

Other pourers were Mary Van Ness, Jane Holcombe, Janice Miner, Virginia Richmond, Katherine Day, Anne Bement, Betty Palmer, Louise Herman, Betty Watson, Priscilla Smith, Elizabeth Marion, Miss Virginia Cobb and Mrs. Harrison Rowbotham.

Miss Katherine Day, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Day, Jr., of Newton, has selected a white taffeta gown with blue piping around the collar and a corsage of pale lavender orchids for her dance at the Algonquin Club this evening.

Her mother will wear gold brocade with a corsage of brown and yellow orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Day are giving a large dinner for the army of ushers and their escorts at their home in Newton before the dance.

Miss Day, who was graduated from the Westover School last June, spent the summer in Europe. She is now studying at the Child-Walke. School of Fine Arts.

Infant Saviour Dance

MRS. M. L. RYAN, assisted by Mrs. Norbert Reilly and Mrs. William V. McDermott, president of the Guild of the Infant Saviour and a large committee is enthusiastic over the large response to the plans for the annual winter dansant, which will be held on Friday evening of next week at the Copley-Plaza.

Mrs. Reilly has charge of the reservations which already are coming in rapidly, promising to make this one of the gala events of the season. Assisting Mrs. Reilly on her committee are Mrs. John Donahue, Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr., Mrs. John M. Morrison, Mrs. Michael E. McGarty, Mrs. James F. Malone and Mrs. Patrick Kenney.

Mrs. Edgar Driscoll, as ticket chairman, is assured by Mrs. John H. Corcoran, Mrs. Thomas O'Connor, Mrs. Frank Fassnacht, Mrs. Edward F. Goode, Mrs. William H. Sullivan, Mrs. Eleanor Sullivan, Mrs. John A. Ginty, Jr., Mrs. Fred McGowan, Miss Ruth Connolly, Miss Dorothy Poor and Mrs. James O'Keefe.

Mrs. G. Tracy Ryan is in charge of entertainment. Assisting her are Mrs. John G. Downing, Mrs. James Everett, Mrs. Paul Kirk, Mrs. John F. Flanagan, Mrs. Stehen W. Higgins, Mrs. Frederick O'Brien, Mrs. Raymond Stuart and Mrs. Charles Hamilton.

GLITTERING GIRL

By May Christie

CHAPTER XXVII

Jake Tyson pondered. While he trusted his daughter, he was skeptical of her ability as a detective. Still she was so desperately eager—he was financially able to put up $50,000 as a guarantee—her reputation, the family reputation were worth it. And maybe the check would never be put through.

"Darling, write it now. Drouet's will wait the week. Let me get busy on the job in my own way."

Jake yielded to her pleading. He adored his daughter, though he did not often show it. And there seemed a method in her madness.

* * *

Vernon scarcely slept that night, her mind revolving various courses of action.

She had been "not at home" to telephone calls of Prince Karinoff. She did not wish, at this stage, to discuss the missing necklace with him.

He had drugged that coffee in the Gypsy Pavilion, she was sure. How else could one account for the dizzy, drowsy feeling that had overcome her almost immediately she had drunk the coffee?

Then—taking her semiconscious to his apartment—and permitting her to pass the night there! It had surely been done for two reasons—to remove the real diamond necklace and substitute the imitation in its place—and to compromise her, so that her lips might be sealed!

Vernon Lays Plans

"The cad! The criminal!" Lots of queer little trails about the Prince that had seeped into her subconscious mind during their brief acquaintance—and which she had carelessly forgotten or ignored—now rose to the surface.

There was the night in Hot Springs—quite late it was—when she had surprised Mrs. de Bray coming out of the Prince's bedroom!

There were several queer things about Mrs. de Bray and the Prince, thought Vernon.

When Mrs. de Bray had left Hot Springs so suddenly, the Prince had accompanied her . . .

Yet Mrs. de Bray was the very one who was consistently furthering the Prince's chances with Vernon! Surely friendship alone couldn't be the motive? They had known these people such a short time. And Mrs. de Bray somehow had always been in the center of their money-spending . . !

It gradually dawned on Vernon that Mrs. de Bray had been skillfully feathering her own nest.

The Tyson family had been fools, permitting themselves to be so exploited!

The first move that Vernon would make would be a visit with Mertina de Bray. As tactfully and as artlessly as possible, she would drag out of Mertina every scrap of information about Prince Karinoff, permitting her to believe that the Prince really had fascinated her . . .

The Prince telephoned again in the morning. He wanted to know if dear Mrs. Tyson was feeling quite "restored," and if he might have the pleasure of coming to call on the ladies that afternoon?

"Why, certainly. Vernon and I will be right here." Mrs. Tyson was flustered. Everything must be done to placate the Prince in the loss of his valuable necklace!

She was furious when Vernon told her she was going out. "Suppose the Prince turns nasty? I call it downright ungrateful of you to be so mean to him! You lose his goods—and you don't even have the decency to be at home to the poor chap! Suppose he not only makes you pay the full amount of his necklace, but drops you, and you lose your chance at his title?"

"Oh, mother, you make me tired," sighed Vernon. No use to argue. But she would certainly be absent during the Prince's call.

A little after half past three she out and walked up Park Avenue and over to Central Park South, where Mrs. de Bray resided. She would take her out to tea somewhere and skillfully find out everything she could about Karinoff . . .

Declines Cocktail

But Mrs. de Bray was away. "I'm expecting her any time," said the maid pleasantly. Vernon thought how much more likeable she was than Arlene. Could it be posible Mrs. de Bray had wished Arlene on them as a kind of watch-dog?

The cosy comfort—nay, even luxury of the little apartment struck Vernon as she entered. Mertina posed as being desperately poor. But here there was no evidence of it.

Tall lamps spilled golden light on a great burst of white lilac, and of flowering dogwood. A heavy Mandarin robe, beautifully embroidered with double dragons, adorned the top of a "baby grand." Set on it was a great vase filled with enormous white chrysanthemums.

The maid switched on the light in an electric fire that cleverly resembled burning logs. Vernon thought whimsically that there was an analogy between it and Mertina. It gave light without warmth!

"I'm expecting madame any time now. Would you like me to mix you a cocktail, miss?" the maid suggested.

"No, thanks." Then the maid departed to the kitchen.

Vernon grew restless. She rose and went over to a bookcase that extended from the fireplace to one wall, its top shelf about four feet from the floor.

Her eye ran over the titles. The books evidently had been bought more for appearance than reading. They were the type that come in showy sets. She stood there drawing several at random, idly inspecting them, and then putting them back.

Finally she found one with an interesting title. She took it over to the couch and proceeded to glance down at the first page.

Something fell from the inside of the book to the floor. Vernon stooped to recover it. It was a parchment booklet of some kind. It had opened as it fell. There were two small photographs gummed inside.

Light from the lamp at her elbow fell upon the pictures as she lifted this document. She found herself gazing not only upon the likeness of Mrs. de Bray but also that of Prince Karinoff!

How extraordinary! She looked closer. It was a passport!

"Marie Metchaeva" was written clearly in ink below Mrs. de Bray's picture! Under the photograph of Prince Karinoff, in his own flowing handwriting, which at once she recognized, was the signature: "Serge Metchaeva!"

Vernon blinked in amazement as she regarded this . . .

What on earth could it mean? What did it portend?

Good heavens!—as her eyes raced over the document—the pair were married!

Vernon's heart thudded with excitement as she stared at the passport. She had come to Mrs. de Bray's apartment in the desperate hope that some sort of clue about the prince might be delivered into her hand by his "friend"—and fate had decreed that this should happen!

"Marie Metchaeva?" There was a familiar sound about that name? Where had she recently heard it?

Why! the stout lady by the desk in the hotel at Hot Springs, who had greeted Mertina de Bray as "Madame Metchaeva" only three nights ago . . . !

And it had been almost directly on the heels of that when Mertina had telephoned Vernon to come up to her room and had told her, in an agitated manner, that she must leave for New York immediately!

Prince Karinoff, too, had departed speedily!

Was it because he also feared recognition from this woman?

There were plenty of vises on the passport. Vernon looked for the most recent. There it was! The pair had entered the United States almost thirteen months ago!

They were Metchaevas then! It wasn't feasible that Mrs. de Bray (so-called) had divorced the "Prince" in that period and married a de Bray . . .

Vernon's head whirled with excitement. She gasped when she saw their ages—"Marie Metchaeva" forty-four, and "Serge" forty-six! There it was set forth clearly on the passport. They gave their nationality as Latvian.

She thought: "This will explain lots of things. The Karinoff necklace indeed, worn by Queen Catherine of Russia!"

She stuffed the passport in her handbag and slipped that thrice-blessed book that had contained it back in the case.

"I shan't be able to wait any longer," she told the maid hurriedly. "Will you plase tell Mrs. de Bray that I am sorry to have missed her."

She was thankful when she was out in the open street. She hailed a taxicab.

The first thing to do was have a photostatic copy taken of the open passport!

* * *

Vernon rose at six o'clock next morning. Her plans had taken shape the day before. She would make a flying trip of investigation back to the hotel in Hot Springs!

Hires Detective

The stout lady who had spoken to the so-called Mertina de Bray under her name of Metcheva would, in all likelihood, still be there. If she had gone it would be Vernon's task to discover her name and present whereabouts. These would doubtless be supplied by the office of the hotel.

From the detective agency employed by the company with which the Karinoff necklace was insured, Vernon had engaged—by the day—a reliable detective-chauffeur.

That is to say, he had the legal right to wear a detective's badge—and he could handle a car.

She had decided she would take this trip without consulting her parents. For they would ask innumerable questions which, at this point in the affair, could not be adequately answered unless she told them of her discovery of the Metchaevas' passport!

Were she to do that, the recovery of the necklace would recede into the blue sky. For her mother most certainly—and probably her father, too—would waste no time in tackling the "Prince" and his accomplice, and both would flee against further exposure!

Or they might even bluff it out, in order to gain time, which was a scare commodity in this investigation.

Therefore Vernon felt herself justified in commandeering the family limousine.

She wrote a little note addressed to Dad. She tiptoed into his dressing room and stuck it in the rim of his shaving mirror.

In that way, he would get it first, and he probably would unfold to his better half only what he saw fit . . .

Vernon told herself she would telephone her father en route around 8:30. This was the time he usually ate his breakfast.

It was 6:25 when she stole out of the apartment.

Health

Operation Is Cure For Harelip

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

SOMETIMES THERE is a disturbance in the development of the body before the birth of the baby.

The abnormal condition which results is known as a "congenital anomaly."

For example, when a person is born with additional toes or fingers, as not infrequently happens, the condition is said to be a "congenital" defect, a congenital anomaly.

Cleft palate and harelip are among the most common of all congenital anomalies. Although the actual cause back of these disturbances is not understood, it is traced to some fault in the development of the unborn babe. As a result the two sides of the upper lip fail to meet and join in the middle. In consequence, there is a cleft or separation of the tissues. This creates the condition known as "harelip."

CLEFT PALATE

Sometimes the middle part of the upper jaw and the roof of the mouth may also be split, opening into the nose. This is "cleft palate."

It is commonly believed that this abnormality is the result of some shock or fright experienced by the mother before giving birth to the child. There is no scientific foundation for such an idea.

Heredity plays an important role in harelip, cleft palate and other congenital abnormalities. As a rule these disturbances occur in certain families, reappearing generation after generation. But this is not always the case, of course. Because a single case has occurred in a family is no reason to fear that every new baby will be afflicted.

There are various degrees or harelip. In some cases the defect may be so slight as to be entirely overlooked for years. In other instances it is quite apparent, presenting a wide gap. This type seriously impairs the nutrition of the baby.

ONLY BY OPERATION

A child with pronounced cleft palate and harelip is unable properly to nurse. Indeed, it may be necessary to feed the child by means of an eye dropper. Great pains must be taken to improve the health and to maintain the physical welfare of the child.

Young children afflicted with this disturbance can only be cured by operation. Fortunately, this procedure has been so perfected that in the hands of a competent surgeon it is nothing to fear.

Some surgeons prefer to operate as early as possible; others believe the operation is performed with minimum danger to the child if undertaken at a later age. But under no circumstanes should it be delayed too long. As the child grows older the bones become firmer and it is more difficult to correct the deformity.

Bear in mind that the child who is born with a cleft palate or harelip is by no means backward or permanently deformed. Once the defect has been corrected these children are as well off as the average child.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

"YOU ARE making this too easy for me," Dr. Edwin Braithwaite said when I outlined to him my theory as to the respective roles played by himself and his feminine student comrade.

"No, only less hard," I countered. "Please forget chivalry for the nonce, and get on with the story. We haven't much time for uninterrupted talk and if I am to retell this story to Harriet, as you wish me to do, I must have all the threads in my hands. The affair had consequences, of course, or you wouldn't be telling me about it. Let us speak plainly. When did you find out about the child?"

NEWS OF THE CHILD

Astonishment, relief, gratitude, all were mirrored in the face he turned to me. I put up my hand with a smile.

"Don't waste time thanking me," I admonished him. "Just answer my question."

"Not for years," he told me astonishingly. "Not until after my marriage to Harriet."

It was my turn to stare in astonishment.

"What?" I ejaculated. "But—surely—"

My voice trailed away, and he smiled sadly.

"I told you it was a strange story," he said, "and her mental processes were the strangest thing about it. At the time I could not understand her at all. I have told you that all this happened in the spring of her last year. I have come to the conclusion since that she really cared very little for me, but was simply carrying out her determination to choose a suitable father for the child she insisted upon having 'all her own.'

REFUSED MARRIAGE

"I heard nothing from her during the vacation, and when I returned to the school in the fall, I learned that she had gone to Germany for a year's study—her people were well-to-do.

"The next time I heard of her was after she had served her interneship and taken up practice with an older woman physician in a distant city.

"Then I met Harriet, and it was all over with me but the wedding bells. I am not going to dwell upon my love for her. I think you realize how much she means to me."

"Indeed, I know, Edwin. Your devotion to Harriet, and hers to you is one of the sweetest married idylls I know."

A DEATH BED MESSAGE

"If I can only save it," he groaned. "I was only just beginning to realize how great a strain upon her love and her credulity this story is going to be."

"Not upon her love, Edwin," I said firmly. "As to her credulity, I do not think she is more skeptical than I am, and I am believing every word you say."

"Bless you!" he said hoarsely, and spoke no more until I prodded him again.

"We must get through with this," I said. "Did you say you saw this—flame—of your youth again, or did you only hear from her?"

"Yes, I heard from her," he said slowly. "She sent a message to me when she found out that she could live but a few weeks. It was then that I learned for the first time that I had a daughter."

VARY USUAL HALLOWEEN PARTY DECORATIONS

Game Suggestions

By MARTHA LEE

BY THIS TIME you have decided upon the food to serve at your Halloween party and probably the decorations—do keep them simple.

Orange and black crepe may be used very effectively, although it is almost impossible to walk past the store windows without getting more unusual delightful suggestions.

Use orange candles placed in black bottles for holders or black candles in orange peels which have been scooped out until clear. A centerpiece of balloons, which have been blown up and painted with weird faces would make a most effective decoration. These balloons may be tied with a piece of cheese cloth for a ghostly garb.

For games, have plenty of things to scare people with and tell their fortunes, apples to be bitten, popcorn to be popped, marshmallows to be toasted and candy to be pulled.

If this isn't enough to keep everyone happy here are some suggestions for games:

SHADOW BUFF

This game is especially suitable for a large party. To prepare for this, stretch a sheet across the room and place a lighted lamp on a table behind it. There should be no other light in the room. The player who is "it" sits facing the sheet with the lamp several feet behind him. The remaining players pass in back of him and before the lamp disguising themselves in every way they can think of—rumpling their hair, wearing wigs and false noses, and distorting their gait and posture. Of course, the one who is "it" must try to guess whose shadow is passing before him, and as the grotesque shadows are quite different from the originals when last seen, this is not easy.

RAISIN RACE

A piece of string a yard long, a raisin at its center, one contestant at each end of the string and the race is on! The first to reach the raisin by chewing the string will be the first to marry.

PUMPKIN GAMES

For the first game place each child before a mirror and give him a teaspoon and a thick glass quart milk jar. The jar is to be held firmly on the head with the right hand while with the left hand the player takes from dishes in front of him a pumpkin seed and puts it in the jar. The game is to see who can put the most seeds into the jar in two minutes.

For the next game take an empty baking pawder can, set it in a round tin basin, and place the basin in a dish pan. Standing at a line five feet from this target, the players try to toss the pumpkin seeds one at a time, into the baking powder can. Each seed in the can counts 10 points, in the basin five, and in the dish pan one. Each child has two turns with five seeds each.

CLUES

Here is a detective game with no ghost nonsense about it. Half of the crowd are Detectives and the other half are Suspects.

The Suspects go into another room. In a few minutes a scream is heard.

The Detectives rush in, turn on the lights and find a murdered man or woman lying in some out-of-the-way spot. The crime at first seems perfectly baffling. But see! What is this on one out-stretched hand of the corpse?

A single hair. A clue! The Detectives now take the single hair and compare it with the hair of each of the Suspects. Then they must come to a decision as to who they think the murderer is.

If they are right, it is their turn to be Suspects. If they are wrong, they soon will have another equally baffling murder on their hands.

And don't forget the ghost story!

Have all the guests seated on the floor in a circle and choose someone who can tell a story dramatically. The lights should all be out and the speaker dressed in a white sheet as a ghost. Here is an old story, but it is still effective.

Spread a sheet out between the guests and request each one to keep one hand under the sheet and hold the edge with the other, as the ghost tells the story of the man who is murdered and whose remains he has with him.

As he explains the different parts of the body, he passes around the pieces to the circle—for the brains a sponge dampened with ice water, for the eyes two grapes from which the skins have been removed, for the veins two or three pieces of long, cooked macaroni, for the teeth kernels of corn, for the hair corn silk, the ear a fig, the hand a kid glove filled with wet sand. By this time the guests will be so frightened and the shrieks so loud that the ghost can ease his way out of the room.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Changed Since He Came to The City

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When we lived in the country, my husband was wonderful to me—kind and considerate.

Since we moved to this city, he has lost his head over a married woman.

When she is around he does just as she says, and doesn't dare call his soul his own.

When she's away he really seems to be glad that her influence over him has gone, and again he is his old lovable self to me. I often wonder how she'd like it if someone was to kidnap her husband, as she has kidnaped mine. Friends often ask me why I don't step out with her husband, and serve her as she has served me. But that would hurt me too much, as I love only my husband.

UNHAPPY WIFE.

The best way to treat a kidnaped husband is with gentleness. After a while the role of little dog Fido coming to heel when the lady whistles becomes a bore, and he is glad to escape.

You tell me your husband seems glad for the "breathing spell" this lady's absence gives him, so it's more than likely you will again find him kind and considerate, if you don't nag in the meantime.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Everyone is telling me I'll be sorry because the man I'm going to marry is ten years older than I am. I'm 17.

My father is twelve years older than my mother, and they've never had a quarrel that I can remember. Do you see any reason why we can't be happy, loving each other as we do? I really look older than 17.

MARY.

No sensible person could think that a difference of 10 years in [illegible] of the man is too much. [illegible] may think that a girl [illegible] o young to marry. If [illegible] parents, whose marriage has [illegible]en so happy, see no objection to [illegible] marrying a man 10 years [illegible]r, the chatter of friends [illegible]s immaterial to me.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

[illegible]'ve been going together for [illegible] years, and have planned to [illegible]rried several times, but my [illegible]her always objects. She [illegible]ks I could do better in a [illegible]dly way. My fiance makes [illegible]gh for us to live comfort[illegible]ly, and I am satisfied. But my mother is not, on account of his business and his salary.

We've had nothing but quarrels at home about this for the past two years, and I am a nervous wreck as the result of them. I just don't know how to tell mother we are planning to be married.

I do everything I can for mother, but is it wise to let this object on spoil our lives? I'm 22, he is 23.

TILLIE.

After all, my dear, you're doing the marrying, not your mother. And if you've been going together for four years and are still in love, that seems to be a pretty good test of the genuineness of your affection. Tell your mother that you've made up your mind to be married.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My mother and I have always got along fine until now, when she is trying to separate my best girl pal and me. We have been friends since the second grade, but mother never liked this girl. However, she didn't do anything about it until lately. I feel sure she could have broken up our friendship then, for I remember her telling me not to walk home from school with a certain girl, and I told the girl bluntly what mother had said.

Today mother and I had the most terrible row. I cried, but now I feel differently. I blame my mother for trying to break up this friendship.

A.

When a girl is only 16 years of age and living under the parental roof, she is supposed to accept the suggestions of her parents who have given her bed and board. Your mother must have some very definite reason for wishing to break up your friendship with this girl, and I trust you will accept your mother's guidance in this matter.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We're deeply in love, and there is no parental objection to either of us except that I belong to one religion, and she belongs to another. My parents, who are very orthodox, object to this girl on account of our difference in faith, though my sister is married to an Irishman who belongs to the same religion as my girl, and they get along beautifully.

My girl and I are very anxious to be married. The objections of my parents are the only thing keeping us apart.

I. S. D.

When this country is the great melting pot of the world, it seems too bad that young lovers should be divided on a question of religion. Live and let live is the modern way of regarding these differences in the worship of God. And with an example of a happy marriage in your family, despite a difference of faith, here's hoping your parents will be reasonable.

"In the Foreground"

By Nell Brinkley

FOOTBALL AND HER CLOTHES

FALL—to the game-minded—summons Football; the image of the pig-skin and hefty players under a nippy sky. And Football to Mamselle summons CLOTHES! Her new clothes, her proud new outfit, to wear to the game.

To some of us who are too busy and will have to admire pictures of football heroes instead of the big handsome realities, Fall yet somehow gets mixed up with football, and the feminine fashions that it brings out. Football in the foreground, with the girl taking first place in her leopard-skins and tweeds, and the real headliner in the background.

And if he's the right sort, he will think her PRETTY long after the leopard-skin and chrysanthemum and pennant and "bowl" days are in the past!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Mrs. Culbertson on Bridge

Development of Defensive

I believe most of the important Bridge discoveries of the future will be in the development of defensive play.

This may seem a radical statement.

It has long been supposed that centuries of Whist play in which no hands are exposed and success depends upon effective partnership card language had just about produced the ultimate in possibilities.

Contract has changed that conception.

So much emphasis was placed upon attack in this new game, with its huge bonuses for games, rubbers and slams that most of the progress of the game has been devoted to developing the offensive.

The new methods of play which have resulted have forced the realization that the time-honored means of defense no longer are adequate.

They are still indispensable, but Contract has created the need for additional weapons of which the Whist, Bridge-Whist and Auction players never dreamed.

So we now have the short suit leads, suit-preference discards and other defense tools, which, first looked upon as entirely unorthodox, now are standard conventions.

And there will be more because defense seems the one inexhaustible field in Bridge.

Exceptional needs—and they arise constantly—give the alert Defender the opportunity for devising exceptional ways and means to meet them on the spur of the moment.

And the unprecedented move of today becomes the convention of tomorrow. Just such an extraordinary emergency faced South in today's hand.

With no tied and proved method to guide him, he nevertheless found his own way to shout to his partner in an unmistakable manner and brilliant triumph was the result.

East, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

North:
♠ 5
♡ A K Q 8 6 3
◇ Q 7 4 3
♣ J 10

West:
♠ K 7 6
♡ 10 7 5
◇ K J 10 9 8
♣ 6 5 2

East:
♠ A J 9 8 4
♡ 3 2
◇ J 9 2 (sic as printed: ♡ J 9 2)

South:
♠ Q 10
♡ 4
◇ A J
♣ 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

The bidding:

East	South	[illegible]	North
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	2 ♡
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South led his singleton four of hearts—his partner's suit—and when North won with the Queen and followed with the Ace, he (South) discarded his diamond Jack. South still wasn't very hopeful until North led the heart King and East followed.

Then he realized the contract could be defeated whether or not the declarer had any diamonds.

So he took no chances on that contingency but gave his partner the positive demand for a diamond lead by discarding his Ace of that suit.

When North faithfully sent a diamond on its way at the fourth trick, it didn't matter what the declarer did about it. South could not be prevented from making a trump trick.

If East ruffed with the spade Ace—his best play—either the Queen or ten would stand up. If he ruffed with any other card, South simply overruffed.

Brag of Conquests

IF THERE IS a detestable thing in the world it is the man who imagines that he is irresistible to women.

When I meet such a man I always want to ask "Who told you you were so attractive?" and I think the answer would probably be that he told himself!

He may not say it in so many words, but there are a thousand small insinuations by which he can convey the same thing; a half shrug when some girl is mentioned, the slight laugh full of eloquence, and sometimes even the open bragging "I could have married that girl if I had liked" or—"Yes, I know her very well—" spoken in such a tone of voice that it is impossible not to hear the inference.

As a rule, it is the young girls whom he marks down for his special prey; those who are not old enough or sufficiently worldly wise to know him for what he is.

One girl of my acquaintance was so sure that a man of this sort would follow up an exciting evening by an immediate call that she would not leave the house for fear of missing him, and when I unkindly warned her that probably she was only one of dozens whom he had treated in exactly the same manner, she was highly indignant. It is not such a bad thing for youth to know such an experience if it takes it in the right way; if it can laugh and realize its foolishness, but on the other hand an inexperienced girl may, because of it, shrink from all other men, and become shy and suspicious.

A friend of mine—a writer—came across one of these lady-killer men, who mistaking her youthful unaffectedness for innocence, tried the old game.

She listened to him for some time with eyes cast down, then looked up and said sweetly—

"You know, you haven't said anything at all original yet. I'm a writer myself, so if you like, I'll write down a few new ways of making love which you can try on someone less sophisticated than I am, who may believe you."

Answers to Beauty Queries

Question: Please tell me whether the setting fluid used by hairdressers has anything to do with drying up the natural oils of the scalp. I have my hair finger-waved every week and I notice that it has gotten very dry. It seems to break off easily, too. My hairdresser uses a heavy, gummy wave lotion.

Washable Cleansing Cream

By ARLINE GOULD

THERE'S NO doubt about it—the art of washing the face has been carried [illegible] to new [illegible].

A washable cleansing cream—perhaps the most unique of its kind in the cosmetic field, and certainly one of the outstanding beauty "discoveries" of the year, is making its Boston debut this week.

[illegible] is founded on a [illegible] advanced [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] the way this cream is [illegible]. A small amount is massaged [illegible] the face and neck [illegible] upward [illegible], and allowed to remain on for a few minutes. Then cup your hands, fill them with cold water and flush the skin.

In this way every trace of cream is removed, and [illegible] [illegible] in fact that no other astringent is needed.

To learn the name of this new washable cleansing cream that [illegible] the whole skin tone, [illegible] blackheads and leaves the face incredibly clean and glowing, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4400, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

GUFFEY ACT BAN IS REFUSED

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 31—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the Supreme Court today denied the application of James W. Carter to halt operations under the Guffey Coal Act pending a hearing and decision on its constitutionality.

The chief justice referred the application for a temporary stay and injunction to the full court. The court is expected to decide the question at its next conference on Nov. 1 and announce the result on Nov. [illegible]

Pretty Cook Held In Cape Breaks

By Associated Press

Barnstable, Oct. 31—A pretty 2[illegible] year-old cook in a Woods Hole summer residence was held today on charges of breaking and entering a home in the district.

Chief of Police Baker of Falmouth and Corporal Kachelin had reported three breaks. He said [illegible] and linen were shipped to New York after being taken.

Baker said police wanted to question Paul Hirscham of New York, also employed at Woods Hole, in connection with the affair.

LOWELL URGES FIVE JUDICIAL CHANGES

Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, former president of Harvard, today proposed a number of changes in the state judiciary system at a hearing before a special commission of the Legislature.

As chairman of the committee on judicial procedure of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Dr. Lowell said that until sufficient time has elapsed to form intelligent judgment as to the effects of the submitted reform, the committee is unalterably opposed to adding an additional $1,000,000 on the taxpayers through the proposal to add 10 judges to the superior bench.

FIVE CHANGES SUGGESTED

The changes suggested by Dr. Lowell are:

1—Transferring to the courts of a full rule-making power, thus relieving them of restrictions set up by statutes enacted three-quarters of a century ago.

2—Regulation of the practice as attorneys of judges, special judges, clerks and assistants.

3—Establishment of district courts on a circuit or rotating basis.

4—Reduction of the number of special judges on termination of tenure of present incumbents.

75-YEAR-OLD PROCEDURE

Of all the suggestions Dr. Lowell regarded the transfer of full rule-making power to the courts as the most vital. He said:

"Today the superior court is operating under rules and procedure determined by statutes originally enacted 75 years ago.

"Where the courts are thus restricted it is difficult to hold them accountable for results.

"The Legislature, which acts only on proposals brought before it, cannot and would not desire to be held responsible. Moreover, the bar is not a legally organized group which can speak with authority for its members.

"As a result the committee finds that no body is responsible or can be held fully accountable for the proper administration of the judicial system."

24,840 KILLED ON HIGHWAYS

By Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 31—Automobiles killed 24,840 in the United States in first nine months of 1935, National Safety Council estimated today.

Milwaukee had the best record among cities of more than 500,000 with 43 dead.

A leader in cities of 250,000 to 500,000, was Providence, with 11 dead. In cities of 100,000 to 250,000, Fall River, Mass., was outstanding. In the classification of 25,000 to 50,000, Central Falls, R. I., and Burlington, Vt., reported no deaths.

Reductions in auto fatalities were reported by 23 states. Among the largest drops were Delaware, 15 per cent; Rhode Island, 31 per cent, and Massachusetts, 14 per cent.

Vermont Birds to Be Higher

By Associated Press

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 31—With Thanksgiving exactly four weeks away, the price of Vermont turkeys in city markets today were reported from five to seven cents a pound higher than a year ago.

2500 Pupils March From School Fire

Springfield, Oct. 31—The quick thinking of a United States post office special delivery carrier today was credited by Principal John Condlin with having prevented a serious fire in the second largest junior high school in the world.

The carrier, Charles Zimmerman, saw smoke issuing from the basement of the Chestnut Street Junior High school, housing 2500 children. He turned in an alarm and rushed to notify teachers.

The 2500 children were led in orderly fashion to the street.

A basement storage room full of desks and equipment was destroyed, but the fire was confined to the one room.

Bay State Relief Gets $2,000,000

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 31—The Relief Administration informed the office of Representative John W. McCormack of Boston today that $2,000,000 would be allotted to Massachusetts for direct relief in the first half of November.

The Relief Administration said funds for the rest of the month would depend on the works progress program in the state.

LEAP SAVES 4 IN R. I. FIRE

Westerly, R. I., Oct. 31 — Four members of a family of six were injured when they leaped from the second story of a burning house in Ashaway today and another was injured when a sheet rope on which he was sliding to safety broke.

The injured are Croyden Hurtado, 11, who broke an ankle when he leaped; Douglas, 8, hurt when a hastily constructed rope of bedding broke, and Mrs. Hurtado, injured when she, with her father-in-law, John Hurtado, jumped.

PAINTING ON VIEW

Have you entered the sea chantey contest sponsored by the Boston Evening American? You have until Saturday night to do so and share in the list of prizes offered for the best chanteys submitted.

There are thirty five prizes in all. The first prize award is an oil painting by Giragos Der Garabedian, famed marine artist of Rockport and Boston, of HMS Bounty, painted on canvas measuring 25x30 inches and valued at $300.

Der Garabedian may be seen completing the painting in the lobby of Loew's State theater any evening this week between 7 and 9. The remaining prizes are made up of cash awards and guest theater tickets.

Merely to give you an idea a chantey's simple rhymed lines—can be written. For instance:

Oh the Bounty sailed the Seven Seas
Peril and Adventure awaited
The mutinous crew set the captain adrift
In a boatload of men that he hated.

That ought to be fairly easy. Why not see what you can do?

The idea for the contest was inspired by the production of "Mutiny on the Bounty," produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at a cost of $2,000,000 and coming to both Loew's State and Orpheum theaters on Friday, November 8. The cast is headed by Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone.

All chanteys must be addressed to the Mutiny on the Bounty Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass. No entry will be accepted bearing postmark later than Monday midnight, November 4.

SECOND SECTION 13 THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1935

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

A new landmark in Washington, probably even more important than the new Supreme Court, is to be opened on Friday of this week. After all, the Supreme Court can sit anywhere, and has, indeed, sat almost anywhere during its past history. The quality of justice was not strained by the necessity to occupy old-fashioned rooms and sit in old-fashioned chairs.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Far different is the importance of the new archives building at Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues. For the first time in the history of the country there is a place where the important documents in our history can be stored and protected.

At present they are scattered over some fifty separate buildings under all sorts of conditions and the survey to determine what documents there are, their nature, and what proportion of them are worth preserving, is only about 60 per cent complete.

Treasury Rats Most Polite to Scholars

The necessity for this new building can not be too strongly emphasized nor can the shameful conditions to which it puts an end be exaggerated. No one can know how much valuable record material has been wantonly and negligently lost and destroyed in the past. Particularly is this true concerning the documents of the earlier administrations. And the conditions in Washington can probably be paralleled in every one of the state capitols of the original thirteen states.

In Charles A. Beard's "The Economic Interpretation of the Constitution" there is a note describing his difficulties in digging out the documents needed in his research into the economic status of the men who wrote and adopted the Constitution.

Although such material had once existed, the papers had suffered every hazard of ignorance and neglect, the destructiveness of time, and the criminal carelessness of man. Once, Professor Beard asserts, he found a colored janitor clearing out a cellar room of early records, because it was getting too crowded, by the simple process of dumping them into a wheelbarrow and having them burned.

A colleague has described to me a humorous talk by Professor Haskins, the Harvard historian, upon the various breeds of rats to be found in the cellars and storerooms of Washington government buildings where old documents are stored. The Treasury rats, he found, were the most polite and humane to scholarly investigators.

New York City Documents
Nearly Sold as Waste

Some years ago a scholar interested particularly in documents relating to New York city government in mid 18th century barely saved them from being sold as waste paper.

The present vogue for saving everything old or related to our past is a very recent interest. No one will ever know the loss to knowledge because of the government's earlier neglect of documents of the utmost historical importance.

Compare with that, for instance, the recent vast increase in historical and literary knowledge of recent years, the result of making available to scholars the documents in various English departments dating from Tudor and Stuart times.

Even such a subject as the life of William Shakespeare has been greatly illuminated and clarified because research in crumbling documents has given us details about law suits and other legal processes, which throw gleams of light upon what the man was doing in certain years.

Declaration of Independence
Was Long Neglected

The monstrous multiplication of paper work in recent years makes it all the more necessary, not merely that a place of safe storage be provided, but that a competent agency shall exist for sifting out the wheat from the trash and preserving documents of basic importance.

Don Marquis told me once how as a young man he wrote a poem every day for a year, pitching each completed verse into a box under his desk. One day the janitor sold the lot for waste paper. Marquis gave up his determination to be a poet and became a humorist.

DOLAN RECORDS GIVEN MAYOR

Ignoring the finance commission's bitter attack, Mayor Mansfield today expressed satisfaction at their agreeing to give the city law department data on the activities of Edmund L. Dolan as city treasurer.

The commission action ended a bitter battle which started last February when the mayor demanded the Dolan data and was refused.

In finally surrendering last night, however, the commission charged the mayor's attacks against them were to cover up his own acts and intentions.

Previously the commission had refused to hand over the data on the ground it was not consistent with precedent established by past finance commissions.

Chairman E. Mark Sullivan still maintained this attitude and voted against handing over the data.

William W. Saxe did not vote on the ground he did not take part in the original investigation.

The other three commission members voted to turn over the data.

SHARKEY CALLS FOR SPAR MATES

BOUT WITH JOE LOUIS GOAL OF EX-CHAMPION

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1935

AUSTEN LAKE

Sports Spookery, Or the Literary Frauds of Athletics

BEING SOMEWHAT RED-NECKED as a group, the college football coaches have risen with their veins swelling and their eyeballs popping to denounce a Mr. John Da Grosa, who is president of a nebulous body called the American Football Institute.

Austen Lake

Having a lot of loose time, between duties as a commercial teacher at Temple University, Mr. Da Grosa has fashioned a "Football Institute," much as a suburban dweller would tack up a henhouse as an outlet for spare energies.

President Da Grosa laments that football coaches unwittingly promote the gambling mania by selling game forecasts to the papers and thus stimulate the sinners to wager on contests.

As a fellow faculty member, Pop Warner replies, in the nature of a confession, "Those who follow the coaches' selections go broke."

It is my experience, in football, that the more expert a man is the less likely his picks are to run true. Because football, of all our sports, runs to contraries

I recall that the winner of a big football picking contest, which was conducted by a New York journal with a pair of tickets to the Army-Notre Dame game as the prize, was an Italian bricklayer, who exchanged the premium for admissions to the six day bicycle race because, he explained, he neither liked nor understood football.

And I recall the private pool, which we used to run during a previous newspaper connection, was consistently won by a semi-witted lad whose duties were to sharpen pencils and distribute copy paper.

* * *

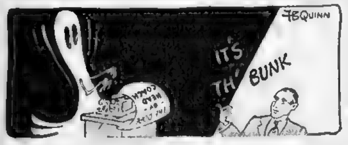
The Literary Counterfeiters

IF PREXY DA GROSA and his flimsy Institute is searching for a sensible gripe, let him pick on the various football coaches who are paid for fraudulently ghosted newspaper and magazine articles.

These, for the most part, are forgeries of uniformly bad work, which, if printed under the name of a regular staffman, would attract no attention as superior journalism.

There is no question that the newspapers themselves are culpable for fouling their own trade by buying such counterfeits, which are printed under the by-lines of the various heavyweight champions, commercial preachers, murder defendants, notorious hoodlums, and a large number of baseball managers, football coaches, jockeys, tennis and golf celebrities and their sons and wives.

It is common practice during World Series time for a syndicate to buy up the signatures of one or more famous illiterates and delegate a staffman to shake out a few opinions on paper for readers of early mental age.



To offset this competition, which, to the discredit of average intelligence, has a certain circulation value, contemporary papers would lease another leatherneck and rush into print with pretenses equally absurd.

* * *

A Uniformly Bad Job

THE FOOTBALL COACH and his spook are under the added handicap of having definite friendships with other coaches, as members of the same union, and therefore cannot let their hair down even if they wished to.

The result is a uniformly bad job of generalizing.

One coach, who derived part of his coaching income from the Chamber of Commerce in the college city where he worked, admitted frankly to me that he did not trouble to read the pieces published under his name, and that the author who did his forging also did that of a half dozen other coaches on the same syndicating trust.

The business of literary niceties and setting down one little word after another has included such prolific and prosperous absentee grammarians as Primo Carnera, Joe Louis, Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Dizzy Dean, whose effortless contributions to the press have been a lucrative sideline with indorsing shaving creams, smoking materials and wearing apparel which they never used.

I recall, several years ago, seeing Ruth fish a dog-eared, uncashed check from among his hard cash, keys and pocket rubbish, which called for $500, "On account of," said Babe, "lying about a hair grease which I forget the name of."

* * *

Hark the Doleful Sound!

OF COURSE, THE ABSENTEE coach-author, or forger, is useful as a sport page feature only as long as he is a celebrity and his teams are prominent.

Thus the amount of newspaper footage under the name of Howard Jones, Southern California coach, has thinned down as his teams have flopped, and that of Glenn Warner has increased in proportion as his Temple troopers are victorious.

I have no quarrel with coaches or athletes who tap out their own stuff on typewriters, of which Bill Tilden, Francis Ouimet, Pat Hanley are a few. This entails a certain amount of suffering and they are, by the authenticity of their essays, full members in the newspaper craft.

A man is entitled to any pickings legitimately gathered on the side. But those literary spooks should be made to pick up their chains, wrap their grave-windings about them and retire to the tomb,

McCoy Keeps N. E. Mat Title In Brawl With Bartush

Count Like Brook

CASIMIR GOES ON WINNING FOREVER

By Paul Whelton

In a very rugged brawl,, Bob (Bibber) McCoy retained his much-juggled New England heavyweight wrestling title in Alex McLean's mat show at Boston Arena by dumping Billy Bartush for one fall and receiving a gift of another.

Straight wrestling and pure Donnybrook were split fifty-fifty during the aggregate of 51 minutes, 34 seconds taken for the three falls, with Bartush having all the best of the rough-house end throughout.

Bartush topped Bibber for the first fall in 11m. 4s. with a cradle hold and body press after the husky pair had slugged and pounded each other with great gusto.

Disqualified

Coming out for the second stanza, McCoy opened by uncorking some more of the first samples therefore enraging Bartush no little bit—so much so that after a steady parade of strangle holds and eye gouges, interspersed with a few Bartush punches against Referee Al Morelli, the third man in the ring disqualified Bartush and awarded the fall to McCoy in 10.52.

A whit—but only just a whit—less frenzied was the third round, with Bartush out ahead of Bibber at the 21m. mark and seemingly headed for the match and title if he did not run into another disqualification.

Then McCoy, spotting an opening launched into the haze and smoke with a hitch kick which floored Bartush. Coming up, Bartush got another pair of brogans, but this time the kick was only glancing.

He was ready for another kick but Bibber with a quick shift butted him hard with a flying tackle and the curtain fell in 21m. 38s.

The semifinal saw Count Casimir Polowski, the stone man, continue his winning streak, as yet untarnished in this country, by dropping John Spellman in 12m. 35s. with a body lift and slam.

PIERS GREAT

Special bouts brought together Handsome Henry Piers, the giant Hollander, and Leo Hyatt, former Good Scout at the Arena, and Boris Demetroff and Scotty McDougall.

Piers, who believes that wrestlers should wrestle and who is fast climbing to a shot at Dan O'Mahoney's title, had little co-operation from Hyatt but still outpunched his man and they drew in 20 minutes.

McDougall tossed Demetroff in 11m. 8s. with a body press.

In the preliminaries Hermi Olson toppled Gene Debuc, Ed Miske forced Jim Wallis to give up with a stepover armlock and somersault, and Max Goldberg defeated Red Ryan in 12 10 with a hitch kick.

Brothers Clash On Fens Grid

A battle of brothers was the highlight scheduled for this afternoon at Fenway Park in the Boston schools twin football bill. Latin was to meet Mechanic Arts in one game, Jamaica to play East Boston in the other.

Charley Hoar Mechanic Arts center, and Walter Hoar, right halfback of Latin, were the brothers slated to crash. Charley is a regular and first class line man. Brother Walter only lately won his position as regular in the Latin backfield.

Rates Brown Bomber With McCreary

And Battler Was Just Fistic Servant With Squire

By Jack Conway

If you think you can fight, Jack Sharkey will give you a job as a sparring partner.

The former heavyweight champion of the world has opened training quarters at Jerry Buckley's Gym on Friend street.

He has started to get ready for his ring comeback, which he is confident will result in a bout with "Bomber" Joe Louis next year

"I weigh only 204 pounds and am already in fairly good condition," Sharkey told me. "I didn't jump into this comeback campaign hastily.

"I got the urge to fight again after seeing Louis knock out Max Baer. I don't rate Louis any beter than Battling McCreary was at the time the latter acted as my sparring partner.

"I considered McCreary a hard puncher and first class boxer. He proved his ability when he defeated Kid Norfolk at the Grand Opera House.

IN PUBLIC

"After the Louis-Baer bout, I gave myself a test in private workouts. Then I did some intensive training in the wilds of Maine.

"I believe I can step in and lick the average run of heavyweights with three weeks' training.

"But I want sparring partners. If you know any fellows who think they can fight and who are not afraid of taking a few healthy punches, tell them to drop in and see me. I'll give them jobs if they are good scrappers.

"I intend to train in public from now on I believe the fans have a right to form their own opinions as to just how good I am. Let them drop around and look me over."

LOU SEES HIM

Sharkey punched the bag for five rounds and did five rounds of shadow boxing and rope skipping. He wasn't puffing when he ended his workout.

Lou Brouillard who sails for Paris on November 8 to box Marcel Thil watched Sharkey in action.

"Sharkey looks all right," said Lou "If he hasn't lost his ability to time his punches, he will lick most of the heavyweights."

TEMPLE COULD WHALE GIANTS—RUNYON

'Cheap Bid for Publicity,' Ace Calls Pro Offer

All Stars O. K.

PROS WRONG, MAWRISS, WRONG

By Damon Runyon
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

New York, Oct. 31—We fear that the owners of the New York Giants, a professional football outfit, are making a cheap little bid for publicity in the challenge to "Pop" Warner's Temple University team for a game in November.

The pros know very well that such a game isn't feasible because of college rules, and college faculty prohibitions.

But they are also well aware that a game such as that proposed by "Pop" Warner, between the 1935 All America college team and a team of professional All-Stars, is quite feasible, indeed, and that's what the pros are trying to dodge by the counter challenge.

It is unfortunate for college football that there are insurmountable obstacles in the way of a Temple-Giants game, at that, though the writer suspects that if these obstacles did not exist, the suggestion would never have been made.

It is unfortunate, because of all the pro teams, Temple would most certainly annihilate the Giants.

LOST NONE

The nice old-fashioned style of football played by the Giants wouldn't do at all against the extremely modern game of the Temples, a team that has won six games this season, and lost none. It hasn't even been tied.

The Temples, in our opinion, would have little trouble with the Giants at this time, and this isn't saying that the Giants aren't a mighty good professional team, either.

It is one of the best teams in the play-for-pay ring. It plays as neat a game of the professional style as you could hope to see. It has a splendid coach in Steve Owens, and an affable owner in "Smiling Tim" Mara.

But all that doesn't bring the team up to a college outfit like the Temple Owls. We mean in the matter of playing football.

The New York professionals would better preserve their pro prestige if they wait until their best players are absorbed into a team of all-stars before even talking of playing a crack college team on the order of Temple.

NON-SPORTING

The best players on the Giants, as we have seen them, would need all the stars of the other pro teams that they can get around them to beat a well-coached crew of collegians playing the much faster football of the amateur set.

When the owners of the Giants put forth their challenge, they must have known it was a direct assault upon college ethics.

We are afraid the professional footballers, especially the Giants, aren't taking "Pop" Warner's challenge in a sporting way.

Some of the other professional magnates are criticising the Giants' counter-challenge for the reasons we have set forth above—that it is an attempted trespass on collegiate ethics, the very thing most of the pro owners are always trying to avoid.

N. U. Star Won't Start At Oval

It doesn't look as if Reid Mahaffey, Northeastern fullback, will start against Tufts Saturday afternoon at the Oval.

Not that Reid isn't first-string calibre. Far from it. Mahaffey is the man called upon by Coach Al McCoy when the Huskies are hard pressed for needed yardage.

The powerful New Yorker was rushed into the Rhode Island State game in the closing minutes to jab over the goal-line with a five-yard thrust in the final play to give N. U. a tie.

Last week his fourth-quarter smash gave Northeastern a 13-4 victory over Lowell Textile, keeping the Husky record clear of losses. Mahaffey scored another touchdown against Norwich, bucking his way down half the field.

But Mahaffey is a fullback. And Jay Hart is a fullback. Jay is one of the greatest collegiate kickers in the East, and his passing is accurate. Thus, while Reid is a better line bucker than Hart, the latter has the advantage of being a triple-threat.

McCoy has tried several combinations in an effort to get Mahaffey into the starting quartet. In one game, Hart started at left half while Mahaffey went to fullback. The foursome failed to click. McCoy's best backfield combination is undoubtedly that of Hart, Hakanson, Di Cicco and Rook.

REDSKINS

Beaten, 14-0, BY DETROIT

Detroit, Oct. 31—With the playing field blanketed in fog, Boston's hard luck Redskins took another defeat here with the Detroit Lions scoring touchdowns in the first and last periods.

Boston threatened once in the third period but lost possession of the ball on the nine yard line on an intercepted pass.

Caddel's 40-yard heave to Schneller gave the Lions their first score and Gutowsky plunged over for the second after a long march. Clark and Christensen added the extra points.

Bruins Beaten By Canadiens

Moncton, N. B., Oct. 31—Despite sparkling play of Cooney Weiland the Boston Bruins were forced to accept a 3-2 defeat in the second of their seven-game series with Les Canadiens, here.

Weiland was instrumental in tying the score twice, but his sensational performance was nullified when Aurel Joliat took a pass from La Rochelle and netted the winning goal six seconds before the final bell.

Games Wanted

The Willard A. C. of Cambridge would like to book a game with any strong semi-pro club at or away from home for Sunday. Stoneham, Waltham A. L., Columbia Club of Danvers, Salem, University Club of Saugus or Swampscott preferred. Other dates also open. Call Bill Gould, Eliot 9371.

SIXTH STRAIGHT CAMDEN LAGER'S GOAL

REVERE TRACK CLOSES TONIGHT

By Sam Cohen

Camden Lager, present Futurity champion of Wonderland Park, figures to retain his laurels in the feature race of the get-a-way card at Revere tonight.

Roy Rutland's fleet canine should make it six consecutive victories. Contention should be offered by Easter John, which tied the track record his last out.

For a good long shot I'm picking Miss Traffic Court, one of the smartest racing greyhounds now quartered at the Revere oval.

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY—PETER GRAND—RED WARWICK—CROSS CUT

8	Peter Grand	2-1	55	Swan Kennels	Looks like the one
7	Red Warwick	3-2	67	Fife & Boringer	The one to beat
6	Cross Cut	3-1	68	Bill Donovan	Won last, may repeat
2	Cladder River	[illegible]	5[illegible]	Ruth Browne	Threw out last
1	Duke Malone	7-1	[illegible]	Frank Athanassaw	In money last two.
3	Will Power	10-1	57	D. J. Marsh	Has shown little
2	Red Wad	12-1	66	A. W. Wadley	No chance here
5	Tarras Runner	15-1	61	W. B. J. Kennels	Has shown nothing

PETER GRAND has the call here, with RED WARWICK offering the contention. CROSS CUT may surprise, but the long shot is CLADDER RIVER.

SECOND RACE—FUTURITY—IMPERIAL DICTATOR—UGLY—AVOID DEFEAT

4	Imperial Dictator	2-1	6[illegible]	Sunnyside Kennels	Last a beaut
7	Ugly	5-3	[illegible]	C. R. Endlister	Distance suits
3	Avoid Defeat	4-1	65	Arch Deferr	Can win this one
1	Crab Orchard	5-1	80	Cooper City Ken.	Disappointed in last
2	Cliffman	8-1	60	Patrick Conway	Can take it all
5	Be a Star	10-1	6[illegible]	Mrs. Opal Warden	Last three bad
8	Just Ketchel	12-1	[illegible]	Frank Athanassaw	Has shown nothing.
6	Patrol Boy	15-1	66	C. A. Butterfield	Distance too long

IMPERIAL DICTATOR turned in a [illegible] the last time out and is admirably suited here. UGLY [illegible] with racing luck. AVOID DEFEAT [illegible] down [illegible] be the one.

THIRD RACE—5-16THS MILE—WHY SHY—JACKIE CONCERN—FEAR ME

2	Why Shy	2-1	65	L. W. Randall	Second last out
6	Jackie Concern	5-1	[illegible]	Addis Kennels	Showing improved speed.
3	Fear Me	[illegible]	60	H. A. Weigand	Disregard last
7	Golden Fay	[illegible]	[illegible]	A. W. Wadley	Distance suits.
1	Just Flint	8-1	53	Southern Kennels	May surprise
5	Hey Laddie	10-1	[illegible]	Whitehead Kennels	Distance too long
4	Officer Dunce	12-1	67	William Baker	Has shown nothing
8	Texas Officer	15-1	66	Clint Blair	Doesn't like route

WHY SHY has shown a fine turn of speed of late and should take this one. JACKIE CONCERN will offer the contention. FEAR ME turned up with a bad one last time out, but has been a consistent money-winner.

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY—BOLD KID—YOUNG PORTHOS—AUNT MANDY

1	Bold Kid	2-1	50	J. J. Keenan	Won last, should repeat
6	Young Porthos	5-3	64	M. J. Gavin	Second to Silver Chief
2	Aunt Mandy	[illegible]	49	L. F. Thompson	Nosed out in last
4	Iron Man	5-1	69	S. B. Cox	Always in money
8	Skelling's Melody	8-1	[illegible]	Hollywood Hts. Ken.	Likes end box
5	Another Star	10-1	63	Patrick Conway	May upset
3	Girl Crazy	12-1	60	Mrs. M. Forbus	Last three poor
1	July Fireside	15-1	61	Charles Holmes	Name may be answer

BOLD KID won [illegible] should repeat. YOUNG PORTHOS will offer the contention with AUNT MANDY taking the short end of the [illegible]

FIFTH RACE—5-16THS MILE—LADY FLIER—ANNA BREEZE PRINCESS EUGENIE

7	Lady Flier	2-1	42	A. N. Chinn	Never out of the money
1	Anna Breeze	[illegible]	50	Roy Courtney	Should offer contention
2	Princess Eugenie	4-1	57	N. G. Allen	Looks best here
5	Stub a Roll	4-1	61	W. J. Dickinson	May get in the money
3	Lady Cutlet	8-1	57	S. B. Cox	Hasn't shown much
8	Sweet Dictator	10-1	5[illegible]	Golden Bear Ken.	Last out very poor
4	Clarvoe	12-1	60	Freda Koontz	Slow finish
6	Benalla	15-1	6[illegible]	H. A. Weigand	Not here

LADY FLIER [illegible] with ANNA BREEZE [illegible] up as she likes the distance. PRINCESS ENGENIE is dropped down and may be the one.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY—LORD LISTER—SLEEPY FRIEND—RED RUN

1	Lord Lister	2-1	60	Dr. B. A. Foorman	Won last out, may repeat
6	Sleepy Friend	[illegible]	60	Frank Fay Jr.	Improving
2	Red Run	3-1	64	W. J. Dickinson	Long overdue
8	Little Doggie	5-1	63	Copper City Kennels	May get up. Last good
7	Silver Chief	8-1	63	Floyd White	Distance too long
5	Mabel Todd	10-1	[illegible]	A. N. Chinn	Likes inside box
4	Chummy Boy	12-1	[illegible]	Hollywood Hts. Ken.	No speed of late
3	Johnny	15-1	[illegible]	Mrs. M. Lading	May be a longshot

LORD LISTER w[illegible] his last out without any effort and should come through in this one. SLEEPY FRIEND has been improving and should be able to take it all if LORD LISTER falters. RED RUN long overdue and should take the short end without fail

SEVENTH RACE—5-16THS MILE—TIJUNA JEW—MAE WIN—DINTY DENNIS

6	Tijuna Jew	2-1	59	Charles Holmes	Last out won easily
5	Mae Win	3-2	57	W. B. Pease	Second to Tijuna Jew
1	Dinty Dennis	4-1	58	Malcolm Baker	Can take it all
8	Danny Grey	8-1	6[illegible]	Augusta Kennels	Will be close
2	Hoping Still	10-1	60	D. Leahy	Can do it
7	Twinkle Liddie	12-1	[illegible]	W. B. J. Kennels	Outside chance
4	African Demon	15-1	71	W. R. Burnett	Disregard last
3	Masked Traffic	20-1	[illegible]	Oscar Dahlberg	Last out very poor

TIJUNA JEW [illegible] MAE WIN as the [illegible] DINTY DENNIS likes the distance and may upset the [illegible]

EIGHTH RACE—FUTURITY—WONDERLAND FINAL—CAMDEN LAGER—EASTER JOHN—MISS TRAFFIC COURT

5	Camden Lager	2-1	60	Roy Rutland	Outstanding chance
1	Easter John	[illegible]	61	Bill Sweeney	Equal track record
4	Miss Traffic Court	[illegible]	[illegible]	Oswald Bros.	Next best here
7	Vagabond Breeze	8-1	[illegible]	Geo. Tirpold, Jr.	Little chance here
2	Hazard Lallie	10-1	[illegible]	J. F. Miles	Too much distance
3	Dance Time	12-1	6[illegible]	H. J. Alterson	Outclassed
8	Risky Leader	15-1	[illegible]	Louis Rachal	Last out bad
6	Just Max	[illegible]	68	A. Haberman	Moving up in class

CAMDEN LAGER [illegible] EASTER JOHN should furnish the [illegible] with MISS TRAFFIC COURT [illegible] part of it.

NINTH RACE—FUTURITY—CAPTAIN SALT—TARRAS SPEED—PEPPER ROLL

1	Captain Salt	2-1	70	J. D. Hall	Looks like the best
6	Tarras Speed	5-2	67	J. Bergham	Will be close
3	Pepper Roll	[illegible]	[illegible]	W. E. Forbes	Can take it all
7	Keen Gift	[illegible]	49	Addis Kennels	Last out bad
5	Bernice Glen	8-1	[illegible]	Frank Lane	Long shot
2	Chink	10-1	[illegible]	H. F. Alderson	Can do it on inside
4	Turf Traffic	[illegible]	[illegible]	Art Wilson	Has been dropping.
8	Anna Glen	[illegible]	[illegible]	L. F. Thompson	Must improve

CAPTAIN SALT [illegible] TARRAS SPEED [illegible] upset the [illegible] PEPPER ROLL [illegible] dangerous.

TENTH RACE—5-16THS MILE—COURT HOUSE—NEVER LATE—ROUGHNECK PETE

5	Court House	2-1	64	Oswald Bros.	Looks like the best
3	Never Late	[illegible]	65	Beamer Kennels	Has been in the money
8	Roughneck Pete	[illegible]	51	John Peters	Disregard last.
4	Frank Lonergan	8-1	69	J. Bingham	Not in form
7	The Motorman	8-1	[illegible]	Bud Sunday	May be in it
2	Dummy	[illegible]	63	Dennis Leahy	May steer or
6	Triumph	[illegible]	60	Art Wilson	Long shot
1	Tuzie	2-1	[illegible]	Wren Kennels	Not out at all

COURT HOUSE will have NEVER LATE to contend with in this one. ROUGHNECK PETE will battle for the [illegible] of it. Few of these have shown any consistency.

MIAMI GRIDMEN IN BOSTON

TACKLE Marblehead ELEVEN

ON SATURDAY IN RETURN GO

Twenty - two football players of the Edison High School, Miami, Florida, disembarked this morning at India Wharf from the steamer New York, headed by Coach Ed Parnell.

The band of gridders were noisily received by a delegation of Marblehead football enthusiasts, and relatives of the team members.

The latter have been arriving in Boston for the past couple of weeks to support the Florida team in its return battle of Saturday with Charley McGuinness' team which trounced Edison in Miami last year.

Miami is without the services of Capt. Roy "Pepper" Martin who sustained an injury at the start of the season and has been confined to the hospital. In his place Larry Tanner is acting captain.

James W. Rose, superintendent of schools in Marblehead; George F. Campbell, principal of Marblehead high; F. C. Rennick, football manager and Coach McGuinness headed the reception committee.

Drill Today

The Marblehead authorities have given the use of the Joel Reynolds field to the visiting team which will hold a short practice session today and another tomorrow in preparation for the game on Saturday.

The reception committee has raised several thousands of dollars in the past couple of weeks to entertain the Miami gridders.

MIAMI BOYS TASTE LONDON WEATHER IN BOSTON

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

A rugged appearing group of youngsters are these members of the Edison High football team from Miami, shown on arrival, at India Wharf this morning, from Florida. They meet Marblehead High on Saturday afternoon in the second game of a home-and-home series. Last December the Headers swamped Edison, but the score may be evened this year.

Creme de Menthe was steadied along in pursuit of the pace established by Spinning Memory, went to the front when called upon and drew out winning with speed to spare. Smilin' Ed was well up all the way and held on gamely to the close. Beggar Maid, outpaced early, swung to the outside entering the stretch and closed with Good Courage. Sun Crump under steadying restraint for the opening three furlongs, moved up gamely midway three furlongs, moved up gamely midway of the turn, but was unable to reach the leaders in the stretch drive. Spinning Memory displayed early speed but faltered in the last three-sixteenths. Cablegram on the outside early was never a factor. Sun Crump was far back throughout.

FOREIGNERS In Horse Show

New York, Oct. 31 (INS)—Teams representing France, Holland and the Irish Free State, which will be entered in the National Horse Show, opening within a few days arrive in New York today from Europe. With the Chilean and U. S. teams also arriving today, the Canadian team will be the only one not accounted for.

Little But Ho!

Detroit (AP)—More than one Detroit University lineman seems to be entitled to use the line about being little but a little tough too. The Titans have only one 200 pounder in their forward wall but all this season no team has made two consecutive first downs against them by rushing and only Villanova has scored a winning play.

3 Gridders On Harvard Committee

Three members of the Harvard freshman football squad were among the 12 freshmen appointed to the Union Committee, Kendric N. Marshall announced today. They are

James B. Fearon, formerly of St. Marks school and present center on the freshman team; Richard Hedblom of Chicago, also a center on the football team, and Charles D. Dyer of Cleveland, who is a tackle.

Caleb Foote, formerly of Belmont Hill, and present member of the frosh crew, is also appointed.

The other members of the committee are: Samuel L. Abelow of Latin high and Roxbury, R. Bennett Forbes of Milton academy, Joseph S. Marvin, Texas; Hugh L. MacNeil of California; Donald McDonald of Omaha; Charles A. Meyer from Andover academy, David B. Stowe from Choate school; Clifford W. Wilson from Leominster high and Andover academy.

Johnson Signed By Bruins

St. John, N. B., Oct. 31—Harold Johnson, American-born hockey player from Wilton, N. D., has been signed by Boston Bruins. He weighs 185 pounds, plays right wing and was a member of a Winnipeg, Man., amateur team last season.

Before turning professional Johnson paced the amateur members of the Boston Bruins training camp to a 5-2 victory over the St. John Beavers. He scored two of the Boston goals.

WADE Signs Contract

Durham, N. C., Oct. 31 (INS)—Duke University officials today announced the renewal of Wallace Wade's five-year contract as physical educator and head coach of the Duke's blue devil football team.

The action was taken by the executive committee of the school on recommendation of the executive committee of the athletic council.

Wade came to Duke in 1931 from the University of Alabama where he coached the crimson tide to three trips to the Rose Bowl. His record in Rose Bowl tilts is two victories and one tie.

Mr. Boston

A Word To Paul

By JACK CONWAY

I DO NOT wish Paul Bowser to think I am trying to tell him how to run his business, but I do believe he should name some young, aggressive wrestler as Dan O'Mahoney's opponent at the Garden on November 15.

Jack McGrath, who brought O'Mahoney to the United States, has had a great deal to say in the selection of the Irishman's opponents.

Mr. Boston

McGrath knows he is manager of the most powerful man in the world, and he has been trying to send him against the Old Guard in the wrestling game.

McGrath has felt that Dan's terrific strength, youth and aggressiveness would enable him to beat down Lewis, Sonnenberg, Rudy Dusek and other mat veterans.

..In the last Danno-Lewis bout, it was pitiful to watch the Strangler after he had been inaction for 60 minutes. He was completely exhausted, and his legs creaked under his great weight.

Managers of wrestlers and boxers have always picked on veterans on the way out of the athletic picture as they have piloted a rugged youngster to the front.

They have argued that the veterans would break under a fast pace. They have also considered such matches helpful in the development of a new star.

When Jack Sharkey first bobbed into the fistic picture, he had Charley Weinert, Floyd Johnson, Homer Smith and the other ring veterans as fistic fodder.

Later, when Sharkey had gained the necessary experience, he took his chances with Wills, Godfrey, Dempsey, Schmeling, Loughran, Stribling and other great fighters.

The Weinerts and the Johnsons, however, had given him the schooling to battle the front line heavyweights on at least even terms.

DANNO'S CASE

I WOULD not be surprised if McGrath were to suggest to Bowser that he match O'Mahoney with ancient Stanislaus Zbyszko or Dr. Koloff.

I'll admit O'Mahoney took his chances with Ed George, but at the time of the first match Don was champion. A second contest was necessary to clear up the controversy that raged following the first.

General John Phelan, chairman of the New York Athletic Commission, insisted upon the O'Mahoney-George bout in New York.

I think Bowser should be very firm in his dealings with McGrath. He should tell Danno's manager he must sign the Irishman to meet one of the best of the new crop of wrestlers.

Chief Little Wolf, Leo Numa, Vic Christie or some other sturdy young athlete would give O'Mahoney much more opposition than one of the members of the "Old Guard." I have seen Christie toss as good a right hand punch as O'Mahoney.

Chief Little Wolfe has his famous "death grip," while Numa has proved a New England sensation with his toe hold from behind.

I think Numa is a better wrestler than Christie or Chief Little Wolfe, but any member of this trio would be a satisfactory opponent for Danno as far as I am concerned.

With any member of this trio shooting at the Irishman, we might have a new mat champion. If Bowser took the precaution to future bouts, he could still promote winning shows even if O'Mahoney were stripped of his title.

JOHNSON HERE

JACK Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world, made a surprise visit to Boston to sign Matty Bloom, Revere heavyweight, to a five-year contract.

The "white hope" craze started after Johnson knocked out Jim Jeffries at Reno, Nev., on July 4, 1910. More than 25 years later another "white hope" campaign got underway when Joe Louis kayoed Max Baer.

Johnson occupies the unique position of managing one of the latest of the "white hopes." Jack plans to school Bloom in the fine points of boxing and then build him up as an opponent for Joe Louis.

Johnson secretly does not believe Louis is as great a fighter as Langford, Jeanette, McVey or himself were when at their best. He wagered $1500 on Primo Carnera to win from Louis.

When Louis won by a knockout there was considerable gloom in sections of Harlem that had followed Johnson's advice to bet against the "Brown Bomber."

Johnson won back his money when Louis stopped Baer.

B. C. Coachship Realization Of Long Cherished Dream

EAGLES' NEW CHIEF DEMANDS FIGHT

But Job Hurts

BECAUSE PAL DINNY MAC IS OUT

By Harry Downes
Head Football Coach at Boston College
As told to Walter Kiley

Ever since I was a little tyke, mascot of the Fort Andrews football team in Boston Harbor, my main interests in life have been centered around football.

It is the game of games to me, the real American sport, one which brings out every quality of manliness and courage and sportsmanship.

The rough contact, the chance to pit physical strength against the other fellow, to match wits and brawn have a tremendous appeal to me.

I never see two football teams preparing for a game that the thrill of combat doesn't come over me, the wish that I could get in there and give and take with the teams on the field.

I had these feelings as a kid and I have never lost them.

They are the reasons why today I feel proud to know that I have accomplished a desire and realized a dream which was far too improbable for me to express openly before.

BROTHERS

I wanted to coach a college football team. And I always hoped that some day I might return to Boston College in this capacity.

The realization that I am now in charge is almost overwhelming.

But that realization with all that it may mean has been won at a heavy cost.

I never expected or would have hoped that my chance would come at the expense of my dearest friend.

"Dinny" McNamara and I have been the closest of friends for years, ever since I was a member of the Boston College squad.

We have been more like brothers, with each of us willing to give his shirt for the other. We lived together and planned together and his success brought joy to me.

I knew that "Din," as I have always called him, "Young Din" to differentiate him from "Old Din," his dad, was the ideal man to handle the Boston College position when Joe McKenney, our gridiron tutor, resigned to accept his new Boston school position.

When "Din" was finally named he insisted on me as his line coach.

We have had great times together. Bill Ohrenberger and I paired as a team with McNamara. Newspapermen always remarked at the complete co-operation of our coaching set-up. We worked for a common good.

DINNY CALLS

And if it were possible, I would like nothing better than to have "Din" back as the boss with Bill and myself taking his orders.

He is a grand fellow, a great football man and we will miss him.

It is unfortunate that he can't carry on. But he will be back to coaching, I hope, in the near future.

Telegrams and letters have already poured in congratulating me.

Let me say that I appreciate them. They were most kind.

But the thing which counted most of all to me was a telephone call from "Din."

"Congratulations, Harry. The best of luck," he said. "You know how glad I am to see you getting your big opportunity. I will be pulling for you from here in."

(To be continued tomorrow)

NOVICE BOUTS At Arena Friday

Another big night is in store Friday when the Irish-American A. A. stages an all novice tournament at the Arena with six classes, 126, 135, 147, 160, 175 pounds and heavyweights.

The reason why there was a falling off in interest in boxing was due to the fact that clubs were not conducting more novice tourneys. The novices of today are the champions of tomorrow. They should be given more encouragement.

Any amateur boxer who has never won a prize is eligible to compete. Send blanks to Tom Kinaly, Boston Arena.

Take advantage of today's great buys. Buy a better, safer, later used car or truck through the Automobile-For-Sale columns of the American-Advertiser.

B. U. Out to Lick N. H.

LINEUP STILL UNSETTLED

By Murray Kramer

Boston University, which travels to Durham, N. H., Saturday to tangle with University of New Hampshire, has several objectives in mind.

First and foremost is to keep its record unmarred.

The Terriers are [illegible] November undefeated for the first time in history, and hope to continue adding to this mark at the expense of the Wildcats.

Also they have a great desire to be the first B. U. club ever to defeat the Wildcats at Durham. Four times have they [illegible] loaded with hope and four times have they returned [illegible] the game.

Just what the starting lineup will be nobody seems to know, not even Coach Pat Hanley.

He will try out that Dale [illegible] they will be at center with [illegible] and Borofsky at the [illegible] his starting quarterback will be Bucky Ford.

The starting backs will be chosen from Glen [illegible], Bob Alex, Fenx Dixon, Ralph [illegible] and George McPherson.

At end, Frank Hurley, Frank LaClair, Harold [illegible] and Chet Smith all rank even.

Co-Captain Dick Van Iderstine is the best of the pack but he will be held in reserve. [illegible] to chance Van [illegible] with Rutgers coming to town the following week.

Although the halfbacks are in doubt there is little worry in that respect. Co-Captain Warren McNamara and Joe Paszek [illegible] one team, and the other [illegible] Pattison and Roy [illegible].

This quartet will work [illegible] Saturday, and it makes little difference which two start.

Either Guy Fanciulli or [illegible] Sparks will be at fullback.

MAT STARS Back With Tech

With Harold George and Ed Bartholomew, both [illegible] mat stars of two years ago, back on the tech team, Coach Jay Ricks sees a bright [illegible] on the horizon for his charges.

George and Bartholomew were unable to come out for the [illegible] last year because of outside wor[illegible]

FENWAY PARK B. C.-H. C. SCENE

THAT'S THE PRESENT PLAN

By Walter Kiley

A better than even chance existed today that Boston College and Holy Cross would stage their annual finale in football at Fenway Park.

Consideration of moving the game from University Heights was started weeks ago, and the decision will be forthcoming sometime within the next fortnight.

Reason for the contemplated move is the limited seating capacity of Alumni Field and the difficulty [illegible] getting to and from [illegible].

Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, S. J., president of Boston College, [illegible] decide the question. Holy Cross [illegible]. But the latter have frequently suggested to the writer their preference for [illegible] Fenway [illegible]

ALL SET

[illegible]

But the change, he feels, will [illegible] come for the [illegible] Boston College game. Other [illegible] Boston College authorities feel [illegible] obstructions now up [illegible] new [illegible] will be shortly announced.

Harry Downes, new head football coach, is one who believes it is for the best interests of the college for the game to be moved intown.

For years Boston College teams played first at Fenway Park, then at Braves Field and finally back to Fenway Park [illegible] before Alumni Field was dedicated three years [illegible].

In the old days capacity crowds of [illegible] and more were the rule, rather than the exception.

Attendances fell off sharply since the game has been staged at University Heights, [illegible] students, alumni and [illegible] friends of Boston College being in the large majority.

Fenway Park Heights' authorities feel [illegible] be more accessible to [illegible] workers who want their half holiday football but find it difficult to get to Newton.

PROVIDENCE

Downes is already immersed in [illegible] Providence game [illegible].

The Friars who defeated the [illegible] are looking for victory. At [illegible] the new coach's [illegible] his team into shape both physically and mentally for a game which shapes up as one of the most difficult of the schedule.

Any doubt which Downes or Boston College followers may have entertained over the loyalty of the [illegible] to their new head coach was dissipated when every [illegible] of the team stood and cheered Downes [illegible] one round after another [illegible] Rev. Patrick Cummings, S. J., faculty director of athletics, officially named him as [illegible] McNamara's successor.

"We will work as hard for you as we did before," stated the spokesman for the players. "You can rest assured that you will have our complete loyalty and our one hundred per cent efforts. We are with you to the man."

Babe Ruth

Reads Riot Act to Magnates

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 31 — Babe Ruth is going to give the major league baseball magnates one more chance to hire him as a manager.

At a gathering of the Circus Saints and Sinners yesterday the Babe, reiterating his statement that he never would play again, said he intends to go to the major league meetings in December in search of an opening.

If no offer is made then, he will look outside the national game for a job, although he would rather continue in baseball.

New York, Oct. 31—Ouch! Natie Brown didn't go to England to fight Jack Petersen because his manager, Professor William McCarney, nonchalantly waved aside an offer of 1500 pounds (about $7500), thinking Robert Tredinnick, British promoter, was offering him only $1500 chicken feed . . . Was Professor McCarney embarrassed when he discovered his error too late?

Tibbett in New Film Role

Lawrence Tibbett, America's famous baritone, returns to the screen as the star of "Metropolitan," Darryl Zanuck production which opens on the screen at the Metropolitan tomorrow.

The new stage revue will be "La Conga," with Bob Hope, [illegible] Jackie Heller and Gypsy Nina as its trio of stars.

Tibbett, who has been absent from the screen for more than three years, deferred his concert and opera engagements for the Hollywood assignment in this new dramatic comedy.

During the course of the film the great baritone voice is heard in selections from "The Barber of Seville," "Carmen" and "Pagliacci," as well as in the popular favorites "The Road to Mandalay" and "Glory Road."

[illegible] the supporting cast is [illegible] Virginia Bruce, with Alice [illegible] George [illegible] among [illegible] Richard Boleslawski directed.

[illegible] star of "Roberta," "Say When" and other musical comedies, heads his own company in "La Conga."

In addition to the featured stars, Selma Marlowe, Dolores Real and Dave Rose are other headliners.

Studebaker Head Optimistic on '36

Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation of America, and his staff of executives [illegible] made a [illegible] trip to [illegible] to attend the New England dealers' convention and pre-showing of the 1936 Studebaker cars at the Copley Plaza today.

Paul G. Hoffman

Hoffman and his staff are guests of Geo. W. Sweet, [illegible] manager of the Studebaker and Pierce Arrow [illegible] for New England distributors.

"We are very optimistic over our prospectus for 1936," said Hoffman. "We are offering finer, safer and faster cars with particular emphasis on "safety" in our 1936 cars. On my coast to coast trip, I noticed a renewed feeling of confidence prevalent in manufacturing, financial and distributing channels that is most encouraging. Direct reports received from key distributing points clearly indicate a general improvement in business, which is conducive to stabilization of buying influences. This gives impetus to new car buying and is concrete evidence that the public is new car-minded.

"We are spending thousands of dollars on new automatic equipment to get a new efficiency and improved stabilization in our production division."

Danvers Man's Story of 1916 Raid On a German Trench

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Back in 1916, the German army had a mystery on its hands. They're probably still worrying about it, so I'm glad to be able to clear it up for them.

The thing they would like to know is who murdered a certain German officer in a German trench in the Ypres salient in Belgium on a certain dark night by the simple process of inserting a knife in the gentleman's ribs and they are probably suspecting everybody from the lowliest private right up to the captain in charge.

FLOYD GIBBONS

I am happy to inform the German army that none of the Germans in the trench committed the crime—that in fact, it wasn't a crime at all, but a legitimate act of war, and that the man who did for Lieutenant Schnitzelbank, or whatever his name was, was a Yank by the name of Charles F. Messick, now residing at 4 Central avenue, Danvers, but then a private of B Company, 31st Battalion, Sixth Brigade, Canadian Expeditionary forces.

And it's Charley Messick himself who is telling us the story. Charley will tell you it was all a mistake.

Well, it was a mistake all right for that Heinie to wrap his ribs around a trench knife, but Charley is talking about another mistake—one that doggone near cost him his own life.

It happened this way. Charley's outfit was holding a salient known as the Bird Cage, because the trenches there had to be braced top and bottom with big four-by-four timbers.

The Canadians were relieved at midnight by an English regiment of the West Kents, and Charley Messick was detailed to stay behind and show the new arrivals the posts they were to hold. When he had finished that, he started back after his company.

Charley's company had moved down the line to relieve another outfit. He went a couple of hundred yards, and stopped to ask directions from a sentry who wore the insignia of his own battalion.

"Go right down this trench," said the sentry, "and take the first turn to your right. You'll run right into them."

And Charley followed his directions to the letter, never thinking that maybe that sentry didn't know his right from his left.

Luckily, Charley saw the German equipment before any Germans saw him.

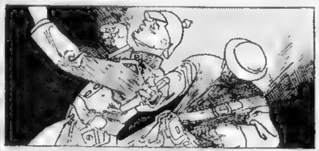
"I wasn't frightened," Charley says. "I was just plain petrified with fear."

He backed into a drain trench, dropped his rifle and pack in the mud behind him and stood, with his trench knife drawn, waiting for something to happen.

It didn't take him long to figure out how he had managed to get into the spot he was in. The trench he had come from was one that had been captured from the Germans.

The cross trench he had followed was the old communicating trench built by the Germans to connect their first and second lines of defence. Instead of turning right he should have turned left, to get back to his own comrades.

But figuring things out wasn't going to help him now. He had to get out of that drain trench and back to his own lines. He picked up his rifle and pack—started to make a break for it, when he heard footsteps squishing through the mud, and three Germans came walking down the line.



"They stopped right in front of me," says Charley. "They were all officers, and lucky for me, they were so busy talking that they didn't look around. I don't know what they were talking about, but I do know that God never got a more fervent prayer than he did from me that night.

"They stood talking for about five minutes. Then one of them walked away to the right and another to the left, leaving the third officer standing right in front of me, with his back so close to me that I could touch him with my hand.

"I put my trench knife where it would do the most good and it had all of my 170 pounds behind it. I stopped long enough to get his revolver and down the trench I went, headed for my own.

"I was making enough noise to wake up three armies. As it was, I woke up two. Rapid fire started on both sides. My battalion had posted a sentry at the point where I had left our trench, and he started to shoot at me. I came in with my hands in the air and they marched me down to my captain's dugout where I was recognized.

"I told my story—and the captain thought it a good joke on me. But he wasn't so pleased with the lad who had given me the wrong direction.

"He had plenty parade held for me to pick the man who had sent me wrong. One fellow looked pretty sick about it, but what the heck, I couldn't pick the man but I could pick grey hairs out of my head for three months after it happened."

A swell yarn, boys and girls—and I'm still wondering what those Germans thought when they found that bird who got tangled up in Charley's trench knife.

Did they think one of their own men had done it and then deserted to the enemy's lines? Or did they know what to think. I'm doggone sure I wouldn't.

And about those yarns you're going to send me—get them in right away. I'm still passing out ten dollar bills to anybody who sends me a good, true adventure. And I'll be back here tomorrow with "Kill or Cure."

STREET RAILWAY

Report REVEALS Gains

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway report for September released today shows a deficit. But that is only part of the story and a bit of digging soon reveals more cheerful features.

Distinct turn-about in passenger traffic is the first item of note and naturally is the source of the pleasant figures to be found in the balance sheet. Operating revenues for the month exceeded 1934 figures by $38,582. Operating expenses dropped $6280 and just about offset a rise in taxes. Before depreciation charges of $105,013 an actual profit of $87,730 was shown.

* * *

This favorable showing is distinctly heartening to owners of the street railways securities and continued improvement in business, together with increased use of buses, should provide even more cheerful news in the future. For over a year we have suggested Eastern Massachusetts bonds as an attractive speculative medium for business men. We naturally cling to that view. And suggest that the junior securities now be regarded in the same light.

* * *

The Dun & Bradstreet trade report for the Boston area contains some interesting sidelights on the cotton industry this week. A considerable increase in spindle activity accompanied further advances in prices. Yarns are in good demand, but consumers are reluctant to pay higher prices. We feel quite sure that the establishment of more profitable levels is assured the industry when the demand factor is so favorable. Cotton mills are just lifting off bottom and mighty low prices have ruled so long that buyers have a hard time understanding increases. But, as in everything else, time should accustom them to the new scheme of things.

* * *

Notebook: Nickel Plate preferred is liked by some traders . . . Motors acted a bit better at the opening today . . . But it was not an impressive display . . . And we repeat advice to avoid the group . . . Utility shares do not seem to be getting anywhere . . . But the Associated Press average climbed into new high ground for the year this week . . . On setbacks power and light shares strike us as attractive . . . Steels try to do better but find the going hard . . . A general reaction would probably establish enough confidence to recruit the needed backing for them.

* * *

The prevalence of bearish views throughout the financial district is the chief barrier to a technical reaction. The expected rarely happens and prices may be worked upward a bit. However, we see nothing in the picture to warrant a buying policy. And the slight recovery to date furnishes traders with a new guide in placing stop loss protection. On the whole, we should say these could now be lifted to levels just under the lows of this week.

* * *

Shorts: A carloadings decline is forecast for tomorrow...Many observers do not think it will be very large...October earnings for the rails should be good...Union Pacific is in the doldrums and we still think the stock would be better off if it slipped down around 83 and got it over with...American Woolen preferred should be just about ready to pull the confusion act...Travel upward against the trend...Shoe share prices close to year's highs tell the story of the industry.

MARKET Undertone FIRM

PROFIT-TAKING APPEARS

New York, Oct. 31—Scattered profit taking levelled prices off a trifle during late trading on the Stock Exchange today, but the list lost little of its steady to firm undertone.

At the beginning of the final hour stock selling 1 to 2 points higher included Chrysler, Bethlehem Steel, American Commercial Alcohol, Schenley Distillers, American Telephone, Houdaille-Hershey, Columbian Carbon and International Cement.

Smaller advances were shown by U. S. Steel, General Motors, Westinghouse, Western Union, Kelsey-Hayes Wheel, National Biscuit, New York Central and Santa Fe.

Large blocks of Universal Pipe & Radiator common changed hands at fractionally higher prices and the preferred was around a point higher. Sales aggregated 2,000,000 shares.

Wall Street's speculative temperature failed to rise with the news that a representative of the Italian government had notified the League of Nations Italy was prepared to enter peace negotiations with Ethiopia.

The move was regarded as designed to postpone the application of sanctions, and only served to confirm the opinion of most financial quarters here that hostilities would be confined to Africa.

* * *

Decision of the Denver & Rio Grande Western to file an application for reorganization under Section 77 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act failed, as the recent similar action by the New Haven had, to have serious market repercussions. Both actions, rail men said, had been too clearly foreshadowed and discounted.

While retail sales in farm areas have been at the head of the improvement column recently, analysts have been noting an increasing spread to the industrial areas.

Checks drawn against individual bank accounts in leading cities haven risen relatively more in recent weeks in the Northeastern and Northcentral industrial regions than in the agricultural areas.

Most brokerage quarters reported the boost in the call money rate to ¾ of 1 per cent from ¼ of 1 per cent had caused no discernible liquidation.

Chrysler to Pay

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—Directors of the Chrysler Corp. today declared a dividend of 75 cents a share on the common stock, payable Dec. 1 to stock of record Dec. 2. While not designated as a regular dividend, the payment compared with a regular quarterly disbursement of 25 cents and an extra payment of the same amount in the two preceding quarters.

STOCK TRADER

Offers VALUABLE Advice

By B. C. Forbes

"Follow stocks up—but don't follow them down."

That's the advice offered by an extremely successful market operator, a man who devotes all his time and thought to analyzing investment and speculative opportunities and earned and retained a comfortable fortune.

This week and last week the New York Stock Exchange has exhibited hesitancy. The long-sustained upward movement has lost some of its vitality. Sharp, temporary spurts have manifestly been engineered by professional manipulators and have not been wholly in response to investment buying.

While the preponderance of responsible opinion is that America is definitely on the way up and that the securities of well-managed enterprises will be benefited—also that some measure of inflation is inevitable—not a few experienced students look for a temporary reaction.

Therefore, the counsel, "follow stocks up—but don't follow them down," may be peculiarly timely.

Another favorite axiom of this same astute operator is, "limit your losses."

I have listened to him telephone buying orders for thousands of shares of different stocks. In case any or all of the stocks selected should go down instead of up, he places stop-loss orders only two or three points below his purchase figure. He calls this "insurance" against ruinous losses.

If and as quotations advance, he raises his stop-loss figure, on the principle, "never let a profit slip through your fingers." Thus, he "rides with the market."

* * *

Another favorite admonition is: "Never try to buck the market."

When he sells short, as he has no qualms about doing, he is equally ready to "run" if the market goes against him. He takes out "insurance" to limit losses on short sales just as he does on purchases.

Incidentally, he confided to me that when a stock at any time dips lower than its minimum of the previous week, he sells out.

This trading formula has proved profitable at least in his case.

But, of course, he neither buys nor sells blindly. Not only does he devote most of his own time to digging into the condition and prospects of companies before he touches shares, but he employs a research expert.

Bernard M. Baruch, who rolled up an enormous fortune in Wall Street and has succeeded in holding on to it, exercised similar precautions, on a large scale. He never, like the proverbial Rube, told his broker to "buy A. O. T."—meaning any old thing.

The novice in speculation is no more likely to succeed than the novice in any other line of human activity. A hit-or-miss policy usually results in missing.

These observations are inspired by the recent expansion in stock market trading and by the market's current wobbliness.

Limiting losses is no guarantee that profits will be garnered. But it at least avoids serious disaster.

As old Commodore Vanderbilt was fond of saying:

"No man ever went broke taking a profit."

* * *

Tax leviers become constantly more ingenious and resourceful.

President C. B. Van Dusen, of S. S. Kresge Company, tells me:

"One of the most recent developments in the tax situation is a law enacted in the state of Wisconsin which requires us to pay a tax of 2½ per cent upon that portion of our total dividends paid represented by the ratio of our Wisconsin earnings to our total earnings.

"Everybody appears to be going tax crazy, and nobody in authority seems to be inclined either to preach or practice economy."

One reader, Philip A. Feiner, asks:

"Would it be possible to develop a central bureau to receive ideas for various businesses from those out of employment, those who have lost their business, etc.?

"Regardless of what political party is in power, this country must go ahead and must depend on business to lead the way.

"Many large concerns might be able to obtain new men, new thoughts, new ideas."

Buy Home Products

And Aid Domestic Industry

THE outbreak of hostilities overseas emphasizes the hazards in building America's economic plans to too large an extent on foreign trade.

In the circumstances, the new impulse to encourage the intensive development of the home market, which has taken the form of the newly organized Made in America Club, Inc., is noteworthy.

When Americans are encouraged to buy domestic products they not only give routine employment but they also foster the creative spirit.

In so doing they open up new vistas of progress.

THE effect of giving added prestige to the domestic, in contrast to the imported, label in raising American living standards will be incalculable.

Under existing conditions, with perhaps 9,000,000 American workers unemployed, it is ruinous to keep them on a dole while giving employment through unnecessary imports to workers in Japan and other foreign countries.

Captain F. X. A. Eble, managing director of the American Match Institute, who is organizing the new club, has wisely emphasized that the ill-considered policies of our State Department are promoting economic recovery overseas rather than at home.

Captain Eble significantly pointed out:

> "When James W. Gerard, our former Ambassador to Germany, returned from Europe recently, he was quoted as saying that the splendid recovery made by Great Britain during the past three years was due primarily to her Buy British campaign.
>
> "This campaign was subsidized by the British Government, which evidently has ideas about supporting domestic manufacture in striking contrast to the ideas of the American Government on the same subject."

THE "Buy American" movement is intended to channelize the superior purchasing power of the American people so that it can provide re-employment for idle American workers.

And, beyond its emergency significance, it is part of a broader movement to establish a balanced economy, which is the true basis for lasting prosperity.

The British Want Babe Ruth

Tired of Cricket?

When Babe Ruth ushered himself out of the ranks of organized baseball last Spring because of dissatisfaction with the Boston Braves, the national pastime lost its most colorful figure and its greatest drawing card.

It has been painful to fans to read of the Babe's activities since.

This great hitter, who placed the New York Yankees at the pinnacle of fame and who attracted more customers than any score of his fellows, received scant consideration by major league club owners.

He was a wistful figure at important contests—in civilian clothes.

Lately he has been playing semi-pro ball on the Brooklyn sandlots, although he doesn't need the money. He loves baseball, you see.

And now, it is reported that the British want him to come over and make baseball the sport in Britain that it is here.

America, though, will not want to see him go—even on the laudable mission of weaning the British away from cricket and converting them to what we Yanks consider a REAL game.

His like will never be seen on the diamond again.

Stepping Stone

At Public's Expense

Four Massachusetts towns, comprising the 10th Middlesex House District, are saddled with the extra expense of a special primary and election.

For this added cost to the tax rate, they get, in the last analysis, a shift of office holders.

The former postmaster of Maynard, a Republican, becomes the district representative.

The former representative, a Democrat, elected for two years, is postmaster.

Of course the politicians, never so happy as when spending the taxpayer's money, are provided by such changes with new material for windy discussions.

But the taxpayer, as usual, is left holding the bag.

Isn't it about time for some sort of contract to be imposed upon those elected to serve a definite term?

Accepting an elective office as a stepping stone to a more lucrative appointive one is getting to be altogether too common.

Toys Streamlined

For Christmas Giving

Store buyers report, after pre-views of Santa's holiday horde, that Christmas toys for 1935 will be streamlined and futuristically colored.

Winchendon in the Bay State and Paris down in Maine continue to hold proud positions as toy trade centers.

For the wealthier lads a toy automobile will be incomplete without a choice of radios.

Dolls, wagons, bicycles and blocks will occupy prominent places under the spruce or fir from Northern New England forests.

Some Boston stores predict a 10 per cent sales gain over last year's total.

It looks as if a lot of young people were going to have what all their elders wish them—a very merry Christmas.

By Air to Europe

Out of Boston?

The Associated Press is authority for the statement that aviation experts of four European nations are studying possibility of establishing regular transatlantic air routes.

If plans can be perfected, the aerial sailings will start within a year.

Passengers, mail and express would be carried.

Back in 1929 Boston-born President Litchfield of Goodyear had in mind the inauguration of such routes.

Along came Old Man Depression, who sidetracked the idea.

We hope this service, when it comes, will be AMERICAN.

With proper encouragement, our aviation industry could certainly fill the bill.

The Significance of Lake Tana

One Reason Why England Is So Deeply Interested--in Humanity

Remote Spot in Ethiopia Vital to Control of Nile

The Blue Nile of Abbai River, two miles below Lake Tana. At this point it is about 180 yards wide.

The Sphere, an English magazine, published in a recent issue the following significant article regarding Lake Tana and what it means to England:

The words "Lake Tana" have been much in the news of late. We hear of special mechanized Italian divisions whose sole object is Lake Tana, of concessions being granted by the Emperor of Ethiopia for the control of its waters, of its possession being the only reason for British opposition to Italian plans for warring on Ethiopia, and so on. Lake Tana is, in short, by way of becoming the Fashoda of today.

Where and what is Lake Tana? Remote in an inaccessible corner of northwest Ethiopia, in a mosquito-infested neighborhood, and with its waters largely running to waste, it lies, neglected but not forgotten. It is situated in a somewhat fanatical and certainly primitive province of Ethiopia and is about half way between Addis Ababa, the capital, and Kassala which is now one of the most important cotton growing areas of the Sudan. Internationally, Tana is tremendously important. Why? Because into and out of it flow the waters of the Blue Nile—the Abbai, as the Ethiopians call it.

Ancient Archives

Lake Tana is a depression in mountainous country, though it itself is at the relatively low level of 1840 meters above the sea. It comprises an area of about 3000 square kilometers. Round its shores, which for the most part are steep but in places consist of papyrus swamps, and also on the numerous islands in the lake, are several churches. In this fact has lain, in part at any rate, the explanation of Ethiopia's previous hostility to foreign exploitation of the Blue Nile waters. One church, that of Stephanos, is said to contain the most ancient archives in Ethiopia and also mummified bodies of former kings of the country.

Political Hostility

For upwards of half a century British statesmen and officials working in Egypt and the Sudan have cultivated relations with Ethiopia, not only because of the importance of that country in Eastern Africa generally, but also because of the possibility of regulating, in the interests of Egypt and the Sudan, the waters of the Blue Nile from Lake Tana. Postponement after postponement, however, has occurred, primarily owing to the political objections and suspicions of the Ethiopians, who always have been wont to credit the foreigner with the desire for exploitation.

Irrigation Problem

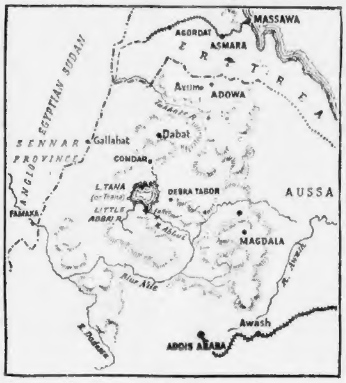
The real problem of the Nile waters is not always understood. The majestic river, on which Egypt depends exclusively for her existence, is not supplied by tributaries inside the borders of Egypt, and is not so supplied, indeed, for nearly 1000 miles beyond her borders. The Nile from the Mediterranean to the Sudan frontier is roughly 700 miles. It is 800 miles beyond this frontier before any tributary is seen. This tributary, the Atbara, rises in Ethiopia. Nearly 200 miles higher, the Blue Nile joins the White Nile.

It is near Khartoum that the White Nile, which rises in Uganda and the Belgian Congo, is joined by the Blue Nile. These two rivers give to Egypt and the Sudan more water than is required except during the months of March to July. The problem of those responsible for the irrigation of these two countries has therefore been how, when and where to construct reservoirs on the Upper Nile which should retain the surplus waters of the rainy seasons and the floods. Both before and after the great war numerous barrages have been built—at Assuan, Nag Hammadi and Makwar, for instance (that at Gebel Aulia is due to be finished in 1937)—to control the river which is Egypt, in effect, and is largely the Sudan also.

Engineering Feat

Ten years ago a magnificent feat of British engineering was completed in the Makwar, or Sennar, dam over the Blue Nile. That dam, however, had not made less desirable the controlling of the Blue Nile nearer to its source, and this can be done only outside the Sudan territory, namely, by Lake Tana. This fact has long been recognized, and various expert commissions have been dispatched to investigate the subject. Their first-hand reports show a consensus of opinion that a reservoir at the southern end of Lake Tana is both practicable and desirable. The Blue Nile rises about a hundred miles south of the lake, runs into Tana and flows out again to the southeast. For 850 miles it runs south, then makes a great sweep to the west, takes a northwesterly direction and finally joins the White Nile.

Lake Tana is, therefore, the key to the controlling of the Blue Nile, and the making of a claim there is essential.



NORTHERN ETHIOPIA—A sketch map showing the position of Lake Tana, for which Britain offered Haile Selassie one million pounds sterling. The offer was refused.

A KEY POSITION—Lake Tana, in the Amhara Province of Ethiopia, which is of the greatest importance to Britain, as it is near the source of the Blue Nile and here the flow of the great river could be regulated to assist in the irrigation of the vast cotton growing areas of the Sudan.

THE ESAT FALLS AT DILDI—A scene on the Blue Nile not far from its exit from Lake Tana.

Text For Today: "He that is of a cool spirit is a man of understanding."—Proverbs 17:27. Suggested by the Rev. A. C. Peabody, St. Paul's Church, Newburyport.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

The arrival of a transatlantic liner, while common enough, is always an event in New York.

The reason is simple. Among the 1500 or more passengers one may count on at least 50 notables, a Mr. Morgan, say, or a premiere danseuse, a diplomat or a professional gambler.

"Names make news and news makes the headlines!"

That is an axiom of one of our foremost publishers; and three or four times a week a boatload of names and news comes past the Statue of Liberty to the long, steel piers along the lower Hudson.

The Europa arrived the other night with its quota. One of the celebrities was a veteran traveler, but it was 16 months since he had felt the cobblestones of West street under his feet.

He had spent his absent time in various parts of the world as the apostle of his religious movement, which has made surprising growth in the 15 years of its existence.

OXFORD ENTHUSIASTIC

A squat, baldheaded, bespectacled man of 57 is the Rev. Frank Buchman. He could hardly be called impressive. In fact, one does not quite take to him at first meeting. He is of Pennsylvania Dutch stock and is a Lutheran minister, although he does not wear clerical garb.

As a young man he did Y. M. C. A. work on college campuses here and abroad. While so engaged, he received his message and began to preach his doctrine of the five C's: Confidence, Confession, Conviction, Conversion and Continuance.

Cambridge University was his first field, and it proved a barren one. The undergraduates did not take kindly to the Rev. Mr. Buchman creeping up on them and shooting the question:

"Are you right with God?"

It was no go, especially when the young men took to calling him "Old Moral Uplift." Undaunted, the minister moved over to Oxford University, where his seed hit upon good ground.

Oxford took to it avidly, so much so that Buchmanism is best known today as "The Oxford Group Movement." Its other names are "The Groups" and "A First Century Christian Fellowship."

THE SAWDUST TRAIL

The last title is a good one since there really is little new about it. A Methodist minister has described it as something which the Methodist Church gave up forty years ago as too dangerous.

He was referring to the old-time camp meeting with its sawdust trail and the hysteria of the sisters and brothers who had decided to be saved even if they had to take a fit in the process.

It does seem that the main thing the Rev. Mr. Buchman has done has been to take the Southern camp meeting out of the pine hollow and transfer it to Park Avenue and to Mayfair.

New York Day by Day

New York, Oct. 31—Hollywood, pumping real money into the anaemic theatrical artery that is the Rialto, has given an impetus to playwriting it has not had in years. More than 50 per cent of the plays this season will have the firm backing of studio cash.

No longer does the harried author have to endure the soul-trying disquietudes that often attended his efforts to angel a show. Such as starring some favored cutie with no talent save a lisp. Or be subjected to the shifting whims of a temperamental producer.

Hollywood has found real gold in these theatrical experiments. In giving quick try-outs at comparatively little expense their experts can get a visual and vocal size-up that saves them enormous sums in avoiding a production that would be a flop.

Nor does the playwright have to have his opus knocking about in theatrical offices for months and often then never read. Hollywood is geared to alertness. When a play is taken to them it gets immediate attention and sometimes a decision within a week.

First night enthusiasm sometimes offers curious twists. Plays that may have long runs have frequently been received with cordial but polite restraint.

Probably the noisiest premiere the town has ever known was the opening of "Agfar," especially at that moment when Alice Delysia burst on the stage in nothing particular save a sunny smile and two flowing veils, singing "Why Don't You!"

The theatre fairly rocked in the longest demonstration ever recorded. The play won no critical fleurons nor was the star of overwhelming allure. They just happened to catch an audience in an agreeable burst of unexplainable enthusiasm.

Thingumabobs: Jim Barton's diversion is owning a semi-pro baseball team in Hollis, L. I. . . . Herbert Marshall is something of a collector of rare editions . . . Bill Robinson, at 58, runs a half mile backward every morning before breakfast.

The young Belgian King is also a swift backward runner . . . Eddie, who carols the ribald chansons at Leon and Eddie's, is a devoted family man . . . Jim Tully's invitation to drink: "Let's up a tankard."

Harry Salsinger, Detroit sports writer, suggested Mickey Cochrane to manage the Tigers . . . Kathleen Norris' state and federal tax of $76,000 is highest among the writing fraternity . . . Damon Runyon's boyhood name in Pueblo was Al.

Pavement pastel: Central Park West around 3 p. m. A group of school girls, none more than 16, all lugging books, four abreast. The majority smoking cigaretts. One-word description by a fussy fuddy-duddy: Sickening.

Listen, World!

Why Do We Like Inferiors?

Elsie Robinson

A letter. A first glance, just another one of those triangles. "Thank heaven that sort of trash doesn't touch my life!" you say. But don't be too sure.

A common set-up . . . two girls, one man, all unmarried. The man's a bright fellow, seems very superior, passed his bar exams well, but hasn't made much of a record since.

Reads excellent books, talks brilliantly but is subject to bitter moods. Feels he's misunderstood—is becoming daily more cynical.

THROWS HER OVER

The older girl has gone with him for years. She's intelligent, generous, deeply devoted to him. She believes he has great possibilities and is always trying to encourage him—urging him to make the most of himself.

At first he seemed grateful for such help but lately he has become resentful.

Now he seems to have thrown her over and is constantly in the company of a brainless, clinging little creature—one of the oh-aren't-you-wonderful! tribe.

The older girl is cruelly hurt. How has she failed him—what has she done to alienate him?

She has, of course, done nothing save challenge his laziness and conceit. But that, with many of us, is an unforgivable crime.

Theoretically, we humans are supposed to be grateful to those who believe in and prod up our better natures. Practically, we're anything but!

SOMETHING ELSE!

We like, of course, to moan about our loneliness . . . brood over misunderstandings . . . spend long hours with some adoring listener, analyzing our yearnings, asking for advice. But when it comes to shutting off the broadcast and getting down to action—that's something else!

Actually, our misery is a most convenient racket—serving several purposes. As an excuse for not Acting Regular, melancholia is The Tops!

But you can't possibly ask someone who's just two jumps from suicide to drop in at Charlie's Market for the supper steak, can you?

Wretchedness also provides swell sops for egotism. Could anything be more flattering than the spectacle of one's self standing apart, lonely and unappreciated, too fine and rare for common understanding?

CANDID WORDS NEEDED

It does not occur to us that the lowly skunk and the humble garlic are likewise isolated—and probably for much the same reason. Ah, no—we're far too pleased with the notion that the vulgar mass remains aloof through awe and envy.

A few candid words from a frank friend would speedily knock this silliness out of us. Which is why frank friends are apt to be so extremely unpopular.

For the last thing we really want to know is the truth about ourselves. And the last thing we want to take is constructive criticism.

Why do we like inferiors? Why do brilliant, solitary souls so often surround themselves with mental pee-wees? That's why. A frank friend would make us use our brilliance and raise Cain with our solitude.
